Introduction

The Aubrey/Maturin sea stories of Patrick O'Brian, popularly called "The Canon," can be seen as one long novel where we meet, quite literally, thousands of people. Aubrey and Maturin circumnavigate the globe during the first fifteen years of the nineteenth century, in the midst of what was really the first "world" war. This was well past the official fifteenth century "Age of Discovery," but there was still much undiscovered country. There was a frontier. Any species of bug, plant, or animal was likely to be unknown to science, to be "nondescript."

This was also a time of great accomplishment. It was the very beginning of the Industrial Revolution, a time of great music and literature, a time of great science. Evolution, for example, was known during this time, just not widely. Erasmus Darwin (1731-1802) explicitly wrote about it. Other scientists of the time knew something was going on. It took Darwin's grandson to finally put all the evidence under one cover with The Origin of Species in 1859, the culmination of the last century's discoveries. Electricity was also known, just not harnessed.

Yet this time had elements of contradiction. With all the eminent learning the theories dominating medicine, for example, were often quite wrong. People were bled to "rectify their humors." General anesthesia was unknown. For an operation you got a shot of rum and a rope to hold you down. A description of dentistry is best left unsaid. The treatment for many wounds was to simply cut off the offending part. Epidemics ravaged whole populations. The prevalence of "pox," as a percentage of the population, was much worse than the AIDS epidemic today. There was no Advil.

Even their conveyance was a contradiction. They circumnavigated the world in the most modern vehicle available, like the space shuttle or Starship Enterprise today. It was also the most powerful weapon known to humanity. The threat of a broadside from one frigate was often enough to make whole countries surrender. Yet this fragile wooden ship was vulnerable to man and nature alike and in constant need of attention. A storm or reef could sink it. Worms, mold, and rust could age it before its time.

Unlike some adventures in literature, where the good guys' bullets hit the detested enemy, but the enemy's bullets never strike home, there is a cost. The cost is the Butcher's Bill, the dead and wounded in battle and accident who fall by the wayside as the remaining protagonists rally forward, hopefully to victory, hopefully to living happily ever after, but realistically, sometimes to defeat.

Often the dead go silent and nameless, and sometimes they go in vivid detail. There is a hierarchy. "And all hands were lost" as a ship of the line founders or explodes may represent hundreds dead. "A seaman" or "a marine" identifies a little more precisely. A name or description adds some clarity and meaning. An accounting of the pain and emotion in the death of a character long known is the most telling.

The intent of the Butcher's Bill is to account for all the dead, wounded, injured, and ill mentioned in the O'Brian novels, whether presented as a contemporary account of actions, or as reminisces of the characters describing past actions. Particular attention is given to Jack Aubrey's many wounds, for he is wounded, sometimes severely, in nearly every book, and in nearly every significant battle. Indeed, by the end of the series he is a walking mass of scar tissue, wonder that he has all his limbs and faculties.

<Insert Jack Aubrey silhouette about here>

Caption: The wounds of Aubrey prior to "Master and Commander." Each chapter contains a portrait of cumulative wounds. The newest are darker, but they fade into the background in subsequent chapters. Note: Actual art work to be commissioned.

It is not the intent here either to glorify battle, nor to be an anti-war screed, but simply to recognize the cost involved. Though neither Jack nor Stephen would ever use the term "died with his boots on," a western cowboy term if there ever were one, this sentiment exists throughout the novels. It may be better to die in action than to wither away in retirement remembering past glories. Lord Nelson, Jack's hero, is a perfect example. Had he lived, would he have been remembered as heroically? Like some other heroes of western civilization (John F. Kennedy is another example) sometimes a glorious death erases sins.

The organization of the main portion of this book is nearly chronological. "nearly" because many times we discover additional details several pages later, or even in subsequent books. The details of Stephen's torture at the hands of the French, for example, take nearly the entire canon to come fully to light. There are major sections for various actions, followed by the Butcher's Bill for those actions. Deaths and injuries follow actions as separate incidents, listed when they occur or when they are discussed. Underlined terms are indexed. If a given character is mentioned several times, you can follow the trail of his wounds via the index.

There are separate listings for Injured and Wounded, though the distinction is sometimes imprecise, just as "knocked on the head" can mean dead, wounded, or actually knocked on the head, literally. For our purposes "wounded" means an injury suffered as the result of enemy action. A wound is "intentionally caused." "Injured" means an injury suffered through a non-combat mishap, whether falling from a topmast yard, or being hit by a block during a storm. It is caused by self, nature, or circumstance, and is not intentional, or at least not suffered through enemy action. Barret Bonden, for example, was intentionally injured by his opponent in a boxing match, but we would term this an injury rather than a wound. "Dead," is, of course, dead by whatever reason, though the circumstances of each are listed. Illnesses are also chronicled, in as precise detail as can be given. Often, a Sick Bay Report is a brief and simple accounting of the current state of the crew. Major Actions are described as a prelude to detailing the Butcher's Bill, to set context and scenery.

In the opening sentence of The Ionian Mission, O'Brian himself says: "Marriage was once represented as a field of battle rather than a bed of roses..." therefore these Marriages, as well as Births and a few other milestones representing gains, losses, and affairs of heart are recorded. Aubrey has developed a bit of a reputation in this last regard, but the record will show that though he is certainly not entirely chaste, these occasions are not at all common. He was a bit of a lubber on land, and he managed to blunder out of as many situations as he blundered into.

The damage to ships in battle was often severe, but this is counteracted by the fact that in the Age of Sail, mariners built much of their own ships while sailing. Except for major masts and structural features, the carpenters, sail makers, and riggers were capable of reconstructing a damaged ship to almost new condition. In modern navies the likelihood of being able to refit at sea is minimal, both because of the complexity and type of materials, and because of the extensive damage that can be done by exploding ordnance. Damage to ships is recorded when it is particularly severe, as are Prizes taken, as they represent a loss to the enemy.

The Tally:

Losses to the British side as a whole in the Napoleonic era (1793-1815) were thus: 16 ships sunk in battle, 125 captured, 251 wrecked, 75 foundered, 15 by fire, 382 losses in all. (reported in The World of Jack Aubrey, p. 42) Personnel losses for the same period were:

- Individual non-combat (disease and injury): 84,440 (81.5%)
- Collective non-combat (shipwreck, fire, explosion): 12,680 (12.2%)
- Enemy Action: 6,540 (6.3%) (reported in Patrick O'Brian's Navy, p.92)

In 1800 the population of Great Britain approximated eleven million, not much more than the population of a large city like Los Angeles today. The losses above total over 100,000 and do not count the wounded and ill who recovered. To put this in perspective of the current population of the United States of America, it is as if 2 million people were killed while serving in the United States Navy over a twenty year period with the loss of 100% of the current commissioned ships. And this is just the Navy alone.

This Butcher's Bill represents over 8% of this total, though much of the total is in reminisces as seamen talk of losses. For example, the HMS York, a ship-of-the line, foundered with the loss of all hands, counted as 600 men aboard.

6,759 British dead are accounted for here, plus 4,134 foreign dead. There are 1,020 British wounded, along with 519 ill, the later number being horribly unreported because the information is not available. All told, there are 13,158 dead, wounded, injured, or ill people of all nationalities depicted in the canon. Jack Aubrey himself receives 42 separate wounds during the course of the O'Brian saga. These numbers are understated. Often the canon is not precise in its own tally, particularly the number of foreign casualties or the number of illnesses on board. Inn cases where a range is given, such as the complement of a ship lost in action, we have used the more conservative figures to avoid exaggeration.

There is not a moment to lose

Finally, the body of the text also contains instances of two phrases found throughout the novels. The phrase: "There is not a moment to lose" and its variations occur 170 times. "There you are!" uttered by Audrey upon seeing Stephen Maturin occurs 65 times in the series. These are the signature quotes of the series and have not previously been documented. These are included to document their occurrence and also because they tend to provide context.

The Tables

The many tables at the ends of chapters detail the named crew members on the many ships commanded by Jack Aubrey. A few crew members appear in every commission of every ship—Jack Aubrey by definition. Many crew members appear only once or occasionally. It is also the case that some crew members appear with various spellings throughout the series. Awkward Davies/Davis is probably the most notorious example. To complicate matters, there are other crew members named "Davis" who do not (or at least probably do not) represent Awkward Davis. "Davis" is not the only surname with this difficulty. In addition, we often discover a certain crew member was on a commission long past several books along. For example, it is not until Book 14: The Nutmeg of Consolation, that we discover Mr. Adams, Jack's clerk, was on the crew of Lively in Book Two: Post Captain. Any time we discover an "ex-Sophie" or an "ex-Lively" in subsequent books, they are added to the crew list for those commissions and so noted.

Jack Aubrey commands most ships for only one commission. The exception is HMS Surprise. This has been divided into four commissions. The first is in Book Three: HMS Surprise. The second begins in Book Eight: The Ionian Mission. This is further complicated when what appears to be the entire crew of Surprise embarks on a temporary mission in the Niobe in the Red Sea in Book Nine: Treason's Harbour, then returns to Surprise for Book Ten: The Far Side of the World. The Second Commission finally ends in Book Eleven: The Reverse of the Medal, when the crew is paid off and the Surprise is to be sold out of the service. The third Surprise commission begins with Book 12: The Letter of Marque when Surprise becomes a private ship owned by Stephen Maturin. It turns out their first shakedown cruise lasting only a few weeks is extremely successful, therefore some crew members retire on their prize money, but essentially the same crew cuts out the Diane and then proceeds for their muchbelated South American cruise. Jack Aubrey does not change ships, and he is still a private captain when the Surprise sets off for South America, therefore this is part of the same third commission. We guite recognize a case can be made to divide this commission into two separate commissions, but because of the factors above, we have chosen to combine this into one. It turns out to be particularly long because Jack Aubrey is reinstated to the Royal Navy and given the Diane, while the very same Surprise crew sails on under the command of Tom Pullings, still as a Letter of Marque. Jack Aubrey finally returns to Surprise at the end of Book 14: The Nutmeg of Consolation, and the same Surprise crew finally arrives home to Shelmerston at the end of Book 16: The Wine Dark Sea.

The fourth and final commission of Surprise begins with Book 18: The Yellow Admiral, and ends with Book 21: The Final Unfinished Voyage. These commissions are denoted as "S1" through "S4" in the tables.

Each chapter also has a table for people other than crew members whom we meet in the course of the novel. This includes some historical figures, authors of books, and characters from mythology, but the intent is to make sure people met on shore are given their due; sometimes they are crucial to the story. The Duke of Habachtsthal is a good example. While never actually met, his shadow looms over several novels, and his death resolves several long-enduring issues in the entire canon.

The tables themselves supply both the chapter and page number from the Norton paperback series where they are first encountered. We understand there are several different paginations for the different editions of the series. We supply the Norton paperback pagination for documentation, i.e.: This is not a strict index documenting every occurrence of a name. A light gray band on a listing in a table means the person was injured, wounded, or ill during the book in question. A darker gray band means he "lost the number of his mess."

Indexes

There are three major indexes for this work. The first Main Index provides references to all underlined names in the body of this work. The Crew Index does the same thing for crew tables, and the "Met or Mentioned Elsewhere" index does the same thing for the corresponding tables. The phrases "There is not a moment to Lose" and "There you are, Stephen!" also have their own minor indices.

With literally thousands of names, many are the same. There are number of "Joes" and "Bills" and quite a few "Smiths." Many times the only way to distinguish between characters is by context or position. We should know that if a character named "Tom Jones" dies in Book Three: HMS Surprise, a subsequent crew member with the same name in Book Twenty: Blue at the Mizzen cannot be the same person. However, there are a couple of resurrection in the canon, so even death is not a perfect indication. In other words, tabulating people in the canon is a somewhat imprecise task.

Combined Table of Ship and Book Abbreviations Ships are listed alphabetically. Books are listed chronologically. Those ships listed as "n/a" have no corresponding crew tables.

Table of Commissions

1: Master & Commander

Injured: Jack Aubrey, a blow to the ribs, administered by Stephen Maturin in retaliation for Jack tapping time to the music. No lasting damage (MC 1:9).

Promoted: Jack Aubrey, from Lieutenant to Commander of HMS Sophie (14). Captain James Bradby, of Pallas, has died. Captain Samuel Allen has been promoted to Post Captain to take Pallas, leaving an opening for Commander of the Sophie (1:13).

"Mr—Mr Maturin. Why, there you are, sir. I owe you a thousand apologies." Jack greeting Stephen for the first time, and likely averting a duel in the process (1:15).

"I shall go down directly and have a look at her—waste not a minute. No, no. That would never do—must give them fair warning." Jack thinking about going aboard the Sophie for the first time, the day after he is given the command. This is the first instance of the phrase in the novels (1:15).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey, by a woman in Deal with a flat-iron who "thought her man should not be pressed" his "first serious wound" (1:22).

Injuries: Pigtail steps: Minorca. The "cause of many a broken limb and battered head" (1:23).

Illness: Lieutenant Richard Baldick: (1st Lt. of the Sophie) In Hospital, with a "Low fever," but actually to avoid shipping with Captain Allen, promoted to the Pallas, and her surgeon, with whom he did not get on (1:24). He believes "Ward's Pill" will cure anything, including scurvy, sciatica, rheumatism, and the bloody flux. Baldick is drinking heavily at this point.

Illness: Yellow Fever: "lost two-thirds of the larboard watch in ten days in the West Indies in the "last war" As related by Lt. Baldick in hospital to Jack (1:26).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey, "Knocked on the head" twice (a reminisce.) Once in the Battle of the Nile and again when the Genereux took the Leander. Jack was the only surviving Lieutenant (2:40). Jack describes these as "honourable wounds" which he thought had led to his promotion, but realized later Queeney may have had more to do with it because of her marriage to Admiral Lord Keith (4:148). Later we learn Stephen had extracted a "piece of metal, a slug" from the Nile action when dressing Jack's wounds suffered on the Cacafuego.

"Lay her for the harbour, Mr Dillon, if you please. Boom mainsail and everything she can carry. There is not a minute to lose." Jack to Mr. Dillon, after an over press of sails has caused a yard to crack (2:77).

"Why, there you are, Doctor. I do hope you will forgive me for ratting on you this afternoon." Jack had invited Stephen to dinner, but was out sailing the Sophie in a shakedown cruise (2:80).

"Lose not a moment, I beg, Doctor." Jack to Stephen Maturin, urging him to report aboard the Sophie (2:81).

Dead: Most of crew of the Charlotte, which had caught fire. Her guns were firing randomly as the heat reached them. Boats from rescuing vessels were unable or unwilling to approach the ship because of the heat and fear of the guns and the magazine exploding. 673 dead. Related by Lt. Dillon (3:85).

"There you are, Doctor,' cried Jack. 'Good morning to you. I trust you slept?" Stephen has spent his first night in a hammock (3:89).

"We must work out this watch-bill and quarter the men before dinner: there's not a minute to be lost." Jack to Mr. Marshall after adding several new hands to the Sophie's muster roll (3:103).

Illness: Mr. Day, self-administered bark made him ill (4:138).

Action: Sophie is protecting a convoy of merchantmen when an Algerine galley sneaks in and boards a Norwegian cat, the Dorthe Engelbrechtsdatter, in the midst of Sophie's gun drill. Having taken that vessel the galley heads toward Sophie and begins firing. After a couple of broadsides from Sophie the galley attempts to run away, with Sophie chasing and firing her forward guns. The galley is spilling wind from her sails in an attempt to lure Sophie in, so Jack launches one last broadside and heads after the taken cat instead. As they come alongside the cat at first they are told the Moors threw the crew overboard. Three bodies are on deck, Moors killed by Alfred King when the prize crew first boarded. However, it turns out the Norwegians had been hiding in a secret hold, therefore they are all safe. The news is devastating because the Norwegian ship is no longer a prize, but rescued instead (4:130-142).

Wounded: William Musgrave, a splinter opened his femoral artery (4:132).

Wounded: the gunner, Mr. Day, felled by a lump of wood from the cap, he has a depressed skull fracture (4:133). We later learn that Stephen's trephine operation has been successful (4:150), earning Mr. Day the nickname "Lazarus" (5:155).

Wounded: The sponger of number four gun when a charge went off in his face. The rammer also pierced his bicep (4:133).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey. A musket ball from a corsair nicks his ear and blows off his hat. "A scratch—nothing at all," said Jack to James Dillon, who asked if he were all right (4:134).

Dead: Pring, gun captain (4:135). Jack mentions two men dead later on, presumably Pring and one other unnamed seaman (4:138).

Wounded: John Lakey, in the ballocks, by a muskatoon ball (4:136). Also Ned Evans, his leg amputated by Stephen (4:140).

Dead: Henry Gouges, loblolly-boy, who died after proclaiming it was his fiftieth birthday, with a cup of un-tasted grog in his hand (5:152-3).

Dead: Four bodies seen on a felluca, dead of plague. Aubrey does not allow Maturin to board to check for survivors (5:155-6).

Prizes: L'Amiable Louise, a French polacre of 200 tons, taken after an overnight chase, sent to Mahon (5:163) and the Citoyen Durand, laden with gunpowder, after a tip from the Norwegian Clomer. Taken by Dillon to Minorca (5:168).

Born: to the wife of the Captain of Citoyen Durand, a son, delivered by Stephen (5:169).

Prize: A fair sized Spanish tartan, mentioned by Stephen. The text gives the impression that "many" prizes were taken during this cruise, but not all specified (6:182).

"...and pull on your stockings, I beg. We have not a moment to lose." Jack to Stephen on the occasion of attending Mrs. Harte's party (6:183).

Stephen to Jack, at the prompting of Mrs. Harte to get the loud and obnoxious Jack away from the party. "Come, come, come,' in an odd, imperative half-whisper, bowing to those whose conversation he had interrupted. 'There is not a moment to be lost." (6:189).

Injured: Robert Jessup, cook's mate, broke his leg on Pigtail Stairs (6:190).

Illness: Cheslin, landsman, not eating and expelled from his mess for being a sin-eater (6:197).

"Why, there you are, Doctor." Stephen comes on deck not realizing a gun exercise is about to begin, a procedure he normally tries to avoid (7:201).

"Why, yes: there is not a moment to be lost." Jack to Stephen on his determination for making the gunnery aboard Sophie proficient and fast (7:204).

Action: At morning light Sophie comes across a convoy of five ships: Gloire (12), a privateer leading Pardal (6) and Xaloc (6), both settees, Santa Lucia, a snow captured by Gloire, and a tartan. They were expecting trouble from seaward, but Sophie is actually closer to shore. Two boats with Lt. Dillon from Sophie take the Santa Luicia first, which offers little resistance. Sophie comes from behind the captured ship and heads for Gloire. As she fires on the French ship a gust of wind spoils the trajectory. The two ships then race parallel to at each other firing as they can. A musketball hits the Sophie's Quartermaster and gives Gloire enough advantage to enable her to run away, leaving her convoy behind (7:210-212).

Wounded: Christian Pram, Quartermaster at the helm, on his forearm from wrist to elbow from a musket shot from the French Gloire. This causes the Sophie to lose her way and the Glorie moves out of range (7:212).

Sick Bay Report: A few scratches, a couple of splinters to draw, an obstinate gleet and a reduced inguinal hernia, plus, of course, Christian Pram (7:215).

Prizes: The Santa Lucia and the Pardal, one of the two settees. Dillon had captured Pardal from Santa Lucia when the Sophie was out chasing Gloire. (7:217) There is some sense later on that Mercedes has been feeding Jack intelligence information on shipments gleaned from her aunt (11:337).

Action: The Almoraira Battery. Sophie heads for Almoraira Bay to draw the fire of the battery while Jack, Pullings, a few crew and all the marines head for shore from the Santa Lucia in boats unseen. The landing party storms the battery to spike the guns as the gunners themselves flee for the town. Jack and La Hire proceed to light off the magazine. Unfortunately, they did not know about a second magazine beneath the first, so they were closer to the explosion than they should have been (7:221-224).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey. Burned on head, neck, and face. The left half of his hair burned off, by standing too close. Stephen treated with "grease" (7:224-5).

Dead: John Hayter, A marine killed on the assault of the Almoraira battery (7:225).

Wounded: James Nightengale and Thomas Thompson, seamen, both wounded on the assault of the Almoraira battery (7:225).

Prizes: The Sophies cut out the Xaloc from Almoraira to add to their number, but are obliged to burn three tartans, which had been hauled up ashore (7:225). After several subsequent but unspecified actions along the coast Jack remarks they have taken, burnt, or sunk twenty-seven times their own weight (7:227).

Dead: An army officer, killed by Dillon in a duel. The officer had accused Dillon of being only interested in prize money and called him a liar when Dillon denied it. As related to Stephen by Dillon (7:231).

Rescued: Stephen Maturin, returning to the Sophie with James Dillon, falls into the sea, They find him five fathoms down, because of his lead-soled boots, by the brothers Sponge, who haul him aboard (8:255).

"There you are,' cried Jack. 'I have been waiting for you this quarter of an hour." Stephen has let time slip away by watching the antics of a preying mantis. Jack and Stephen are to have dinner with Mrs. Harte (8:267).

Affair: Molly Harte and Jack. Although there have been some mild hints previously, we learn without a doubt that Jack and Molly are engaged in an affair (8:270).

Rescued: Henry Ellis, a prospective midshipman on his first cruise, falls overboard at a most inopportune time when Sophie is being chased by a much larger frigate. At first they thought he was drowned, but Stephen hung him upside down and blew tobacco smoke in his lungs to revive him (9:285).

Escape: Sophie escapes Dédaigneuse by constructing a raft with stern lights to mimic those on the ship. As the French frigate chases the raft in the dark, Jack maneuvers Sophie far out of the way (9:287-91).

Sick Bay Report: As the Sophie sails from Minorca, four of her seamen are in jail for rape, four have not recovered from the stews, and one has a broken collar bone and wrist, all this from shore leave (9:294).

Illness: Tom Simmons is reported to be sick. It is his birthday (9:300).

Affair: Jack discovers Molly Harte with Colonel Pitt at Ciudadela (9:300-10:302).

Prize: A richly laden Spanish coastal vessel of 6 guns, 200 tons (10:302). Intelligence provided by Mercedes, whose aunt provided details (10:342).

Dead: Tom Simmons after four days in an alcoholic coma. It was his birthday and his mess hands gave him their ration of rum. He drank an entire quart, uncut. He was buried at sea (10:305).

"Why, there you are," Jack after Stephen, unwanted and in the way on deck, arrives at Jack's cabin to get out of the way (10:309).

Prize: Pola, a tartan bound for Genoa with 8 hands (10:311-12). Intelligence of the ship was provided by Mercedes (10:342).

Action: The crew of Sophie hears distant gunfire. Out of a squall comes Felipe V, a Spanish privateer of 7 guns, which immediately fires on the Sophie. As Sophie returns fire the Felipe V turns to run for Barcelona, but her rudder is damaged and she soon strikes her colors to Sophie and is taken as a prize (10:313-4).

Action: Cacafuego (32) versus Sophie (14). Sophie heads right for the Spanish frigate, turns to the side at the last moment and fires broadsides into the ship. Sophie is much lower in the water and fires upwards while the Cacafuego's guns fire over the Sophie. As the Spanish give the order to board Jack booms off Sophie. This maneuver of getting in close, firing, then backing off is repeated several times. With the Sophie behind Cacafuego Jack orders the crew to prepare for boarding. Stephen is to steer the Sophie into Cacafuego once more. The Sophies board in two parties, one fore, one aft, and a tremendous fight aboard the Spanish vessel commences. The Sophie's crew of less than a hundred was vastly outnumbered by over 300 Spaniards, but the element of surprise is on the Sophies' side. Jack has Bonden strike the Spanish colors, and they manage to get all the Spaniards into the hold with a couple of loaded carronades pointed down the hatch before they realize how vastly they outnumber the British (10:325-333).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey, below the right arm, near the ribs. Jack is stabbed by a pikeman as he storms the Cacafuego, the Spanish frigate. The pikeman withdraws for another blow and Bonden, standing behind Jack, blows off part of Jack's ear as he kills the pikeman (10:332).

Dead: Lt. James Dillon of the Sophie, of a wound to the heart, in the action to take the Cacafuego (10:333).

Dead: Henry Ellis, midshipman, in the action to take the Cacafuego (10:333).

Wounded: Watt, boatswain, in the attack on the Cacafuego (11:334). We later learn he is lame from his wound (11:365).

Dead: Cacafuego: 15 killed (including Captain Don Martin de Langara and the boatswain), 41 wounded (11:335).

Dead and Wounded. We have a discrepancy here. Prior to the actual boarding Stephen has "four quite wounded men, two corpses." (10:330) These were from the battle thus far. Later on Jack writes of the deaths of Ellis and Dillon, and that Mr. Watt and five seaman were severely wounded" (11:334). Later in the same letter Jack writes there were three killed and eight wounded on the Sophie (11:335), a figure repeated by Jack, Admiral Lord St. Vincent, and also Admiral Harte in Post Captain. However, we have four deaths reported, not three: Two of these just prior to the boarding, plus James Dillon and Ellis during the boarding. Of the wounded less is sure. Jack talks of Mr. Watt and five seaman wounded, and appears to be discussing the boarding party itself, yet he lists eight later on, when it probably should have been nine, not counting himself. Any way you add it up, whether or not Jack is including himself, does not work when you count the four previously wounded and two dead reported by Stephen.

Wounded: Jack Aubrey, a slash on the left shoulder. After the battle Jack discovers the slash, but does not remember receiving it (11:338).

Illness: Jack Aubrey, ill because a friend of his (Molly Harte) has been "too liberal with her favours, too universally kind." Dosed by Stephen in plenty of time (11:349).

Dead: HMS Utile (16), sloop, foundered during a gale with all hands lost. Sophie survives the same gale (11:352).

"We shall be able to start watering tonight and be on our way as soon as possible in the morning. There is not a moment to lose." Jack to Mr. Dalziel, the new 1st Lieutenant after Mr. Dillon was killed. Jack is hoping for another cruise (11:352).

Promoted: Alfred King, to Bosun's Mate. There are discipline problems because the men have prize money and some are frequently drunk. Jack disrated John Morgan from Bosun's Mate for drunkenness at the same time. Jack hopes that King, a large black man whose tongue was cut out by Moors, will be a better deterrent (11:359).

Illness: Midshipman Ricketts has swallowed a musket ball. Stephen gives him an emetic (11:364).

Action: Sophie is assigned to accompany the packet Ventura up the coast. As Ventura is very slow Jack takes the opportunity to explore the coast of Spain. They come upon a small village with three small merchantmen anchored offshore. The inhabitants beach the ships. Jack waits until midnight, rows a party ashore, and torches all three ships. The resulting fire attracts a French squadron: The Formidable (80), under Captain Lalonde, the flagship of Admiral Linois, the Indomtable (80), under Captain Moncousu, the Deasix (74), under Captain Christy-Pallière, and the Muiron (38), a frigate. Sophie attempts to slip away from shore pretending to be an inconsequential merchantman, but the Muiron captures the Ventura, which gives away Sophie. The French squadron chases the Sophie as Jack has her guns thrown overboard, then her stores, to no avail. So Jack reverses course, sails between the French battleships, and attempts to outrun them (11:325-377).

Surrender: Sophie strikes colors to Desaix, a French Ship of the Line. Captain Christy-Pallière, impressed with Jack's maneuvers, refuses to take Jack's sword from him (11:377).

Wounded: Three Frenchmen, bitten by Mr Dalziel's dog after the Sophie was captured (12:379).

Action: French ships anchored beneath the batteries on the Spanish side of the bay at Gibraltar are attacked by seven English battleships under the command of Admiral Sir James Saumarez. Jack and his crew are prisoners and observers. The English ships anchor next to the French as both fleets exchange broadsides. The French ground their ships on shore and send their gun crews to the batteries. The English ships quit the battle and leave the grounded Hannibal to be captured by the French. The upside down British flag is raised, a signal for distress, prompting boats from the English side to row toward Hannibal, assuming she is again afloat, in an attempt to tow her away. As the boat crews reach the ship they are taken prisoner by the French (12:382-8).

Dead: The captains of the Formidable and Indomtable, Lalonde and Moncousu, died in the fighting (12:387).

Dead: on Hannibal, 75 dead, 52 wounded, and on Desaix: 100 dead, 100 wounded (12:389).

Paroled: Jack Aubrey and his crew, in a prisoner exchange. However, Jack is technically under arrest for losing the Sophie, and so must surrender his sword to the admiral, which he did not have to do when captured by the French (12:391).

Action: The British and the combined French and Spanish fleets set sail off the coast of Gibraltar in "The Gut." The battle commences about 25 miles off shore. Details are brought back by Heneage Dundas in the Calpe. Superb sailed between Real Carlos and Hermenegildo firing both broadsides at once, then moving out of the way. Both these ships fired into the smoke cloud left by Superb and thereby hit each other. Both ships ultimately blew up. The Superb then took on the San Antonio, out gunned her, and took possession (12:405).

Injured: Jack Aubrey suffers a head wound because he forgot to duck and hit a beam as he entered the great cabin to hear the decision of his Court Martial, This caused him to miss much of what was said (12:411).

Exonerated: The Court Martial finds Jack Aubrey not guilty (12:412).

Prizes taken: We're unsure of the exact number of ships taken by Jack and the Sophie. In Post Captain Scriven mocks up a poster claiming £100,000 worth of prizes, but he also says the figures were "for form." Jack responds that Scriven is exaggerating (PC:6:207).

Caption: Figure 1-1: Jack Aubrey's wounds from reminisces and action aboard Sophie. Note: Lines are drawn from a brief description of each wound to the part of the anatomy affected. For example "Part of ear shot off by Bonden" with a line to the ear. Two injuries, eight wounds, some of which were reminisces

Butcher's Bill:

This and subsequent Butcher's Bills are tabulated as follows. Direct casualties, are those that transpired within the novel itself. Reminisces are reports of past events, such as Jack being "knocked on the head" at the Battle of the Nile. The "Foreign" column is for those deaths, wounds, and injuries that are tabulated within the novel, usually as a plain number, but sometimes with names attached. For example, the casualties of the Spanish in the Cacafuego action were listed as fifteen killed, including Captain de Langara, and 41 wounded. The numbers listed here cannot be held as definitive. Often the information is imprecise, such as "several wounds" or needs some guesswork. For example, the loss of HMS Utile "with all hands." It is a small craft of 16 guns, therefore its crew would be somewhere between 120 to 195. (See "Warship Rates," page 57, Patrick O'Brian's Navy)

Table 1-2: Crew of HMS Sophie

Notes

1. Ship's Complement: 89, including officers, men, boys, and marines (3:92). The text suggests 91 men total. Mowett says they are two midshipman short (3:103), so this number agrees. He also says there are 77 men in the common berth (3:105). This also agrees. Later on Dillon says there are 46 in prize crews and 54 left on board all told, giving a total crew of 90 (10:320). However, there are 113 men listed above (animals are excluded from the count as is the captured French cook, Durand). There are only three "First name only" listings: (Tom, carpenter's mate and George, Marine, and Joe) and one generic (Jack-in-the-Dust) which cannot be confused with another crew member. Even accounting for replacements (Dalziel for Dillon, for example, there are still more men listed than the complement. Perhaps there were some crew changes while Lively was in port.

Table 1-3: Met or mentioned elsewhere in Master & Commander

- Officers and others sitting on Aubrey's Court Martial for losing Sophie.
 "He had been exceedingly attached; and she was so bound up with that time..." (2:52) This is very likely a reference to "Mona," though it is not definitive.

2: Post Captain

Peace: Declared on March 25, 1802, The Peace of Amiens lasted fourteen months (1:13).

Injured: Jack Aubrey falls off a gelding when his attention is diverted to watching Diana. His boot catches in the stirrup, so he is dragged twenty yards. He is rescued by Stephen on a mule and some landsmen. He is scraped up a bit, but not seriously hurt (1:20-21).

Absconded: Jackson, Jack's agent, with all the prize funds. Jackson had been running a Ponzi scheme. Jack is now completely broke (3:64).

"I shall go up to the Admiralty today. There is not a moment to lose." Jack to Stephen upon learning he is in debt for £11,000 because a couple of his prizes won their court battles with him claiming they were illegally seized (3:67).

Escaped: Jack Aubrey, to France with the peace to escape creditors (3:88).

"Why, Stephen, here you are at last,' cried Jack, starting straight out of his sleep."

Escaped: Captain Christy-Pallière warns Jack and Stephen not to linger in France. Stephen also receives a note from Dr. Ramis that war is to be declared and all British subjects in France arrested. Stephen has Jack dress in a bear costume. disguises himself and has a false Spanish passport in the name of Joan Maragall. In this manner they cross the French-Spanish border and then to Stephen's dilapidated castle just across the border (4:103+).

Illness: Jack Aubrey. We learn Jack had some sort of illness after arriving at Steven's castle in Spain. (5:121). It is not until Chapter Six that we learn he had "Mountain Fever" (6:167).

Illness: Many of the crew of the Indiaman, Lord Nelson, from Spanish Influenza, including Major Hill, a passenger (4:122).

Action: Lord Nelson versus the privateer Bellone (34). Lord Nelson is armed, but has few trained men. Bellone, a French privateer, seeks to take her as a prize. Jack takes command of some of the guns, but they are plagued by wet powder, an untrained crew, and some of the guns explode. Though Lord Nelson manages to pummel the Bellone and repel her boarders on her first attempt, the second is successful when the boarders come from the undefended starboard side in boats. The number seven cannon explodes, killing three and blowing the gun captain's head apart (5:131).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey. The jawbone of the gun captain, a deserted seaman named Haynes, grazes Jack's arm. An iron splinter grazed his head and knocked him down, and he fell through the forehatch and was stunned (5:131).

Dead and Wounded: Haynes, a "boy" with both arms slashed to the bone. Stephen used a tourniquet (5:133), Two Lascars and a midshipman were wounded when the #1 gun breached on its first discharge (5:134). Tom Pullings suffered grape shot in his thigh, a sword cut in his shoulder, and two broken ribs (5:137). Captain Dumanoir de Plessy, a former (French) King's officer, is wounded by grape shot (5:133). Stephen extracted a ball from the captain's shoulder, and as a result, he and Jack, although prisoners, are allowed on deck. It is unclear whether the ball is part of the grape shot or another wound. We don't have good figures here, but the report is a total of 36 killed or wounded.

Action: Lord Nelson, now in the hands of a prize crew under Captain Azéma, first encounters a British privateer which is beaten off and then is chased by HMS Seagull, a brig. Azéma sends Jack, Stephen, and the other officers into the hold, where they can only hear the cannons. When they are again let on deck the Seagull is badly damaged and broken off the fight. Lord Nelson is off the coast of Spain when HMS Colossus, a line of battle ship, HMS Tonnant (80), and two more British ships come into view (5:137-148).

Rescued: Stephen, Jack, and the Lord Nelson (5:148).

Promoted: Heneage Dundas from Commander to Post Captain in the Franchise (36) (6:161).

Injured: Jack Aubrey's knuckles split when he hits Adam Scriven, an unemployed translator who feebly attempts to rob Jack as he is walking from Lady Keith's back to the small cottage he and Stephen are renting in London (6:179).

"Why, Stephen, there you are,' cried Jack. 'I was quite anxious for you." They then discuss Scriven, weighing the possibilities. They could turn him over to the authorities, and he would be hung or Jack could sell Scriven (a lawful prize) to Stephen for dissection (6:180).

Command: Jack Aubrey is given the experimental double-ended ship, HMS Polychrest (6:187).

Promoted: Jack asks the Admiralty to promote Tom Pullings to Lieutenant and to join him aboard Polychrest (6:188).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey. Stephen claims Jack lost the rest of his ear in the battle aboard Lord Nelson, but Stephen sewed it back on. There is some sense that Stephen is saying this to Sophia for the shock value; he later says he frequently sews on Jack's ears. It may not have really happened (6:189).

"Then "Lose not a minute," says he, driving us all though fit to drop." Tom Pullings describing Jack fitting out the Polychrest to Stephen (7:202).

"Hurry, there is no time to be lost." The phrase occurs twice in Scriven's poster advertising for able seamen to join the Polychrest (7:206-7).

Pressed: Tom Pullings presses seven cross, but able seamen from the Lord Mornington into service with Polychrest (7:209).

Dead: Lucock, nephew of Bonden, whom Jack had promoted to midshipman, aboard the York, which foundered and was lost with all hands. It is suspected that poor workmanship in the yards contributed to her demise. Estimate of 600 dead (7:211).

Action: Jack Aubrey attends Lt. Pullings' celebratory dinner, which is attacked by a group of bailiffs attempting to arrest Jack for debt. They were made aware of Jack's presence by Scriven, who betrayed him. He seeks to jump out the window, but there is a group of bailiffs waiting for him below. As the Polychrest's barge is within shouting distance, Jack yells for Bonden and a rescue. The seamen make a ring so Jack can safely jump, then run for the ship. A row ensues which results in the pressing of several more hands from the group of bailiffs (7:213-5).

"Where's the Doctor? Pass the word for the Doctor. Ah, there you are. Shove off." Jack is in the barge heading back to the ship (7:215).

"...and in order not to lose a minute....Jack had given orders to unmoor" the Polychrest, to travel slowly up the channel in the fog (7:215).

Injured: Parslow, a midshipman, cut himself from ear to chin while shaving, a wound for which he was proud, but it needed Stephen's attention (7:225).

Injured: Mr. Parker, 1st Lieutenant of the Polychrest, fell down the main hatch injuring his shoulder after he had been dazed by a falling top gallant mast a few minutes before (7:230).

Injured: 17 men in sick-bay, including two men with hernias, five broken bones from falls, and the rest from "usual wounds" from falling spars, blocks, and ropes. This after the Polychrest encounters a gale (7:231).

Dead: An unnamed landsman from Shepton Mallet, lost overboard (7:231).

Illness: A thief from Winchester has gone mad aboard ship (7:231).

"Come, come, there is not a moment to lose; I make my rounds at seven bells." Stephen to Jack urging him to begin playing a sonata by Corelli on his new fiddle (7:236).

Injured: William Edwards, two teeth removed by Stephen as a result of Mr. Parker's discipline, A marlinspike was tied into his mouth. He was then forced to run about deck while being chased and hit by the bosun. Stephen stops the punishment and causes a major disciplinary issue because he countermanded a superior's orders. Stephen apologizes, and this gives Jack the opportunity to tell Parker to ease off on his idea of discipline (7:241).

Dead: Jean Anquetil, of a musket ball which nicked his aorta. The Polychrest was ordered to pick him up from the French shore, a spy of some sort with valuable information. As the sloop carrying him leaves shore they are followed by another which fires upon them. Although the Polychrest's carronades drive the pursuing boat away, they have hit their target, who dies soon after coming aboard (8:280).

Flogged: Four received six lashes apiece, one received nine lashes, and Carlow received twelve lashes for thievery. (8:282)

Affair of Heart: Jack Aubrey and Diana Villiers. There have been slight allusions to this for some time, but nothing really definitive. But Jack comes back on board Polychrest in high spirits smelling of the perfume Stephen had given her, which Stephen recognizes (8:286).

"Very well, gentleman,' he said aloud,' let us make it so. There is not a moment to lose." Jack to a group of officers as they decide the procedures to make Polychrest move a little faster (8:294).

Illness: A young topman with the pox, gained on leave at Portsmouth Point (9:297).

Rescued: Matthew Bolton, fell off a yard, bounced off a backstay, and splashed into the sea. Rescued by Jack, who made him behave by telling him a shark was nearby, Bolton had a contusion on his chest, but was otherwise not injured. This was Jack's twenty-second or twenty-third rescue, by his own reckoning (9:298-300).

Action: Polychrest (24) versus Bellone (34). Polychrest comes across the Bellone escorting two merchantmen. Although Jack could have taken the prizes, which have struck their colors, he chooses to attack the Bellone instead. There is revenge for the Lord Nelson in the air. After a raging cannon battle mistakes aboard Polychrest allow Belone to escape toward shore. Polychrest follows and as the two ships near the shore near Gijon a Spanish frigate comes on the scene. As the Spanish frigate begins firing on the Polychrest, Jack lets loose one last broadside, which takes the mainmast of the Bellone just before she hits the reefs. The Spanish tell Jack he cannot go in after her, but that her back was broken and she would never sail again anyway. Although this is disputed by Admiral Harte, who chooses to dismiss it, English merchants award Jack a sword from the Patriotic Fund as a reward for ridding them of the Bellone (9:313+).

Dead: A seaman: killed by a low ball across the deck from the Bellone. Also, "the gunner," presumably Mr. Rolfe. from a carronade burst. His body was slid over the side (9: 319). Total from Polychrest: 5 dead reported by Admiral Harte: (9:322). Total from Bellone: At least 40. Jack counted 40 splashes over the side during the chase.

Wounded: 3 wounded in the carronade blast when the gunner was killed. (8:319) Macdonald: His arm was hit by grapeshot. Stephen performed an amputation (8:347). Total of 7 wounded, reported by Admiral Harte (9:322).

Sick Bay Report: Stephen returns from a leave of absence to find one man smelling of gangrene after a Cheseldon's lithotomy, Jackruckie with a troubling hernia, and one man with a bandaged head, all taken care of, not so well, by Mr. Thompson, who had substituted for Stephen (10:335).

A Prize: Taken by Jack in Polychrest, who avows it will be the only one (10:340).

Challenge: Stephen Maturin is approached by Captain Heneage Dundas to talk to Jack Aubrey about his now obvious affair with Diana Villiers, which has been noticed by the Admiralty and is affecting his performance. Stephen also has feelings for Diana. He has also been away for some weeks and has returned with a tan, though he claims only to have been in Ireland. Jack becomes very angry and accuses Stephen of having ulterior motives for warning him off Diana, plus Jack calls Stephen a liar and challenges him to a duel. Heneage agrees to be Stephen's second. Stephen borrows Macdonald's pistols and practices in the dunes, placing a handkerchief at chest height, marking off his paces, and tearing it to shreds with shot after perfectly-aimed shot. He then tosses a coin into the air and hits it easily (10:342+).

Affair of Heart: Jack Aubrey, nearly despondent over their argument, walks to Diana's lodgings and scales the wall, his coat and sword guarded by Fred, the mastiff. He sees Diana with Mr. Canning in her bedroom, then quietly slips away (10:352-3).

Mutiny: Averted. As the Polychrest sails for Chaulieu, Stephen catches wind of a potential mutiny and asks to see Captain Aubrey, an unusual step for two people about to duel to see each other beforehand. Jack calls all the men aft and tells them he knows what is going on and that he intends to take the ship into battle within hours. He sends some men into a barge to be towed astern, and sets as much sail as possible (11:362+).

Action: Polychrest at Chaulieu. Mr. Goodridge and Capt Aubrey believe they are well placed to take several transports and gunboats in the harbor. They head straight for these ships only to run aground on a sandbar. It turns out they made a navigation error in the fog. Both forts in the harbor fire at Polychrest, along with several gunboats. Jack sends a barge out to cause a diversion and takes a volunteer group in boats to cut out the Fanciulla (20), their main goal, perched under the Convention battery. After boarding the corvette the Polychrest crew drop her sails, cut her lines, and sail her out. Both batteries realize the Fanciulla has been taken and begin to fire on her. They try to heave the Polychrest off the sandbank. On the second try she comes free, but is badly damaged by the shore batteries and gunboats. There is six feet of water in the well and the lower decks are awash. Polychrest follows Fanciulla out of the harbor, the latter firing at transports as she goes. Finally the Polychrest begins to sink. Fanciulla takes the remaining seamen aboard. On the way out of the harbor the Fanciulla targets several transports, taking one, sinking one, and grounding five. Another was set ablaze by a shore battery (11:371-384).

"... There's not a moment to be lost.' Killick handed him his pistols and he dropped into his gig." Jack to his crew as they head off to take the Fanciulla (11:373).

Dead: 4 men at the capstan bars of the Polychrest were killed by a shot as they were attempting to get the Polychrest off the bar (11: 381). 17 dead altogether.

Wounded: William Babbington suffers a grievous wound to the left arm (11:374). Jack later writes a letter to his parents to prepare them, but says at least he has his sword arm is intact, but in any case, he is in good hands with Stephen. Later on we learn the arm was saved. 23 wounded altogether (12:385).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey. Besides the hit on the head from a piece of metal he suffers a sword cut on his shoulder that causes a severe loss of blood (11:375).

Prizes: One transport and the Fanciulla, cut out from Chaulieu (11:384).

Acquitted: Jack Aubrey and his crew in the sinking of the Polychrest in the mandatory Court Martial after the loss of a King's ship (12:386).

"Come, come, There is not a moment to lose. Get in." Stephen to Jack urging him into a post-chaise, where he is to hide from bailiffs (12:388).

Code Broken: The Fanciulla's captain did not destroy his papers. The Admiralty is aware of all the current French signals (12:391).

Promoted: Jack Aubrey, to Post Captain, seen by the Admiralty as a complete reward for his career thus far (12:393).

Dispersed: The crew of the Polychrest, in small groups to ships of the line, to avoid another mutinous situation (12:395).

Posted: Jack Aubrey, as a temporary "Job Captain" to HMS Lively (38) while her regular captain, William Hamond, attends Parliament (12:401).

Promoted: Lt. Parker, to Master and Commander of the Fanciulla, which has been bought into the service, recommended, reluctantly, by Jack Aubrey. Parker visits Jack aboard Lively and reports a change of heart as a result of his promotion. Jack warns him that he should curtail his tendency to flogging and Parker agrees (12:428).

"...Ah, Stephen, there you are—" Stephen is about to go ashore. Jack, fearing arrest, stays on board (12:430).

Wounded: Stephen attends to a "shocking" belly wound in Hospital, and reports that Babbington's arm will heal and need not be amputated (13:432).

Illness: Wallace, in need of a suprapubic cystotomy, performed by Stephen (13:437).

Action: Although the Lively is considered a "crack frigate," this is confined to sailing ability, not gunnery. Because of rules against the use of powder and shot for practice, Jack sails the Lively up the French coast and engages the Balbec battery. The battery also fires on Lively, destroying one of her boats. As the crew of the battery flees, Jack sends in a party to secure a boat there and so take the place of the destroyed one (13:440-441). The Lively also attacks and destroys a battery at Barfleur as well as a semaphore station at Cape Levi (13:443).

Affair: Diana Villiers has gone into keeping with Mr. Canning, who is himself married (14:446).

"There is not a moment to be lost." Jack to Charnock, the carpenter, Simmons and Stephen on what is to be done to make the cabin of Lively fit to house Sophia and her sister (14:452).

An Understanding: Jack and Sophia Williams agree to "an understanding" that they will marry no one else, the meeting painstakingly arranged by Stephen and Admiral Haddock by getting Sophia and her sister aboard Lively for a few days (14:459).

Promoted: Stephen Maturin, to a temporary rank of Post-Captain, much to Jack's amazement. This is an Admiralty maneuver to cut Stephen in on any prize money for their next expedition (14:468).

Confession: Stephen Maturin to Jack Aubrey, on his need to occasionally lie because of his line of work, thus accounting for his tan. The duel between Stephen and Jack seems to have fallen by the wayside in the wake of the Chaulieu action, Jack's wounds, which were attended to by Stephen, and subsequent events (14:475).

Dead: Cassandra, the ape aboard Lively (14:477).

Illness: Stephen Maturin, sure he has the symptoms of rabies, as he was bitten by a female horseshoe bat. In fact, he is seasick (14:480).

Sick Bay Report: Aboard Lively: orcaitis, scurvy, and Ludolphus' Palsy (14:481).

Action: Lively (38), Indefatigable (40), Medusa (32), and Amphion (32) vs. Fama (34), Clara (34), Medea (40), Mercedes (34). Stephen's intelligence shows the Spanish are about to enter the war, but not before a considerable treasure is transported to Spain. He succeeds in getting Lively appointed to the squadron to intercept the Spanish squadron off Cadiz. The British squadron orders the Spaniards to shorten sail, and negotiations ensue. These quickly fail, partly because of the impatience of the British Commodore, and a battle ensues. The Spanish actually fire first, but The Mercedes blows up completely, presumably with the loss of all hands, and the Spanish squadron strikes colors. The Fama, although she struck her colors, proceeds to run from the task force. Lively takes up the chase and ultimately overtakes her, and the treasure, reported to be 5,810,000 pieces of eight (14:485+).

Wounded: Unknown seaman, fracture of a femur, splinted and bandaged. 2 splinter wounds, deemed superficial, 1 musket ball. Bolt is one of the wounded (14: 491).

Dead: John Andrews and Bill Owen. The flying figurehead of the exploding Mercedes cut both men in two (14:491).

Table 2-5: Met or mentioned elsewhere in Post Captain.

Notes:

1. Stephen visits En Jaume on his way out of France with Jack dressed as Flora, the bear. It turns out he is the uncle of the godfather, En Pere, of the little girl who found Flora. Much later on in The Fortune of War we discover En Jaume is a Catalan agent who has been killed by the French.

3: HMS Surprise

Lost: Prize money. The Admiralty decides the six million "dollars" in Spanish loot (about £1,000,000) captured at the end of Post Captain is not to served out as prize money because England was not at war with Spain at the time. This would have made both Jack, Stephen, and the three other captains who took part very rich. There is some sense that Jack's reputation, and that of his father, played a part in this decision to withhold the reward (1:5-6).

"It was essential to act without the loss of a moment." Sir Joseph Blaine to the Admiralty Board discussing the intercepted Spanish treasure ships (1:6).

Cover Blown: Stephen's cover as an intelligence agent is blown because of unfortunate remarks made in public by the First Lord of the Admiralty (1:9).

"For once there was no violent hurry; for once that 'jading impression of haste, of losing not a minute, forsooth' of which Stephen had complained so often, was absent." Aboard Lively bound for the Mediterranean (2:36).

Engaged: Jack Aubrey and Sophia Williams. An official notice is printed in the Times (2:41).

Action: Lively takes a signal station by landing a crew a couple of miles away to take it from behind. Its two twelve pound cannons could not be swung away from the sea. They spiked the two guns, destroyed the semaphore and blew up the magazine. The last remaining Frenchman let the crew know the French Diomède (40) was in the area. This in a letter from Jack to Sophia (2:42).

Action: Lively attacks and destroys two more batteries on shore at Port Vendres and attempts to cut out what was thought to be the Diomède. It turns out to be a store ship, the Dromadaire, which runs aground as they attempt to take her out, so the ship is burned to the waterline. Meanwhile a couple of gunboats close in. Jack, Killick, Bonden, and Butler take part of the Lively's crew, composed of Chinamen and Malays, and row to the nearest gunboat and board her. The Livelys proceed to slaughter the entire French crew by slitting their throats and cutting off their heads. Lord Garron recovers the French signal book during this encounter (2:44-50).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey. Suffered a gash in his forearm. Mr. Simmons is limping from bashing his shins (2:46).

Dead: The entire French gunboat crew. Number unknown, but likely in the dozens (2:46).

Prize: The gunboat (2:48).

Action: The Rescue of Stephen. After failing to rendezvous with Stephen Maturin as planned Jack discovers he has been captured by French authorities operating in Port Mahon, which is now in the nominal hands of the Spanish. A man named Martinez fingered Stephen (3:66). With the help of a local in the resistance, Mr. Maragall, Jack takes some crew aboard the captured gunboat, pretends to be French (using the signal book), and ties up at a wharf. His crew splits into several small groups so as to not arouse suspicion and meet up at the Garden House, a place Jack knows well because it is where he and Mrs. Harte had a liaison (MC). Jack kills two of five soldiers in an interrogation room; his crew gets the rest. They free one prisoner from a rack, then proceed to the house itself. Potier, a corporal and Normand are quickly dispatched. They capture an officer, Dutourd, who leads them to Stephen, who says Dutourd must be killed. But just then Colonel Auger arrives and is killed by released prisoners. Dutourd uses this distraction as a time to escape. He leaps out the window. It is then unclear what happens, but one interpretation is that Dutourd is killed "while trying to escape" by Java Dick, one of the Malay Livelys (3:70-73).

Dead: 8 to 9 French, including Corporal Potier, Normand, Colonel Auger, and probably Dutourd (3:73).

Wounded: Stephen Maturin has been tortured on what appears to be a rack. He cannot walk, and his hands have been horribly mangled. We don't really know what has happened for some time. There is speculation that his fingers were broken. They may have been, but we find out much later in chapter six (6:138) that he has a "nail less hand" suggesting his fingernails were removed. We also learn (6:181) that his right hand suffered more than his left. In "Surgeon's Mate" this is confirmed. Three nails on his right hand have been torn out (SM: 11:349). In The Commodore we learn that thumbscrews is one of the instruments used on him (COM:3:72).

Arrested: Jack Aubrey, for debt to Parkin & Clapp in the amount of £700, sent to Bolter's sponging house on Vulture Lane (4:75).

Cover Blown: Edward Griffiths, of the embassy staff, a French spy listed in papers Stephen managed to take from Port Mahon when he was rescued (4:82).

Affair of heart: Stephen Maturin, with a young woman of a very good family, which ended badly, as related by Sir Joseph Blaine. This liaison comforted the Admiralty when they were considering using Stephen's services as an intelligence agent. They thought his chastity might point to unusual interests (4:87). This might be Mona, who is mentioned briefly in Thirteen Gun Salute (1:47 & 4:89).

Released: Jack Aubrey, after a Fanshaw's clerk paid the debt from an advance on Jack's gratis payment for capturing the Spanish. However, he barely made it out because more writs were on the way, so Jack repaired to the Grapes, in neutral territory where he could not be nabbed (4:90).

"You may run, Bonden, if you choose. There is not a moment to be lost." Stephen to Bonden as he tries to arrange a meeting between Jack and Sophia (4:91).

Posted: Jack Aubrey, to Captain of HMS Surprise (28), one of the last "Jack ass frigates" in the Royal Navy, considered small and old. Jack had served as a midshipman aboard her and knows the ship as a fast, dry, and seaworthy vessel. Once again, Stephen has manipulated the situation to get Jack on Surprise (4:92).

Injured: Kelynach, aboard Surprise, who fell off a topgallant arm and luckily fell into the sea. Jack begins to suspect scurvy aboard when he sees Kelynach and Garland at Divisions, both of whom show the signs (5:110).

Dead: Simmons, who was Captain of Surprise before Jack, and had let discipline slip before he died. He had been ailing. We are not told what killed him (5:112).

Sick Bay Report: Aboard Surprise. 1 broken arm, 1 hernia with pox, 4 plain poxes (5:113).

Illness: Stephen confirms reports of scurvy aboard, mostly from the crew of the Raccoon, many of whom had been transferred to the Surprise after a four-year tour off North America, with no shore leave. (5:118). The scurvy later spreads to nearly all the Raccoons, plus many Surprises and landsmen (6:139-140).

Storm: The Surprise is in a dead calm off St. Paul's rocks. It is Sunday and Stephen desires to go ashore. Although Jack blows him off when Stephen asks for a boat, Lt. Nicolls offers to row him ashore. Nicolls makes a shelter made from the boat and oars and Stephen wanders off to look at boobies. Suddenly a quite strong squall hits both the Surprise and the island. Nicolls is apparently washed out to sea and never seen again. The Surprise has been blown off the island and it takes several days for Stephen, now "broiled, desiccated, and mummified," to be rescued. Aboard the Surprise he discovers a seaman named Tiddiman was also washed out to sea from the heads, and also "3 boys" were set adrift. The Surprise is much damaged (5:130 – 6:138).

Dead: Lieutenant Nicolls, Tiddiman, and three others. (6:138) There is some sense that Nicolls, in a despondent mood, allowed himself to be drowned. This is confirmed much later on in Far Side of the World when the Surprise returns to the same waters and the incident is remembered as "[Nicolls] who had almost certainly let himself be drowned off this very rock" (FSOTW: 4:144).

Eaten: Stephen's pet rats, on which he was experimenting with madder, by the midshipman's birth (6:141).

"...and I tell you soberly, Jack, that if you persist in this dogged self-defeating hurry, hurry, clap on more sails, not a moment to be lost, then most of the people will pass through our hands, including, no doubt, that black thief whose very bones will blush for shame." Stephen to Jack, angry that his rats have been eaten, and proclaiming he will dissect whomever stole them (6:141).

Promoted: Midshipman Babbington, to Acting Lieutenant because of the death of Nicolls (6:142).

Illness: All the midshipmen, given a heavy laxative by Stephen. They were incapacitated the next day. Although Stephen may have been purging their systems of the madder-dosed rats, there is a sense of retribution here as well. Ironically, Babbington, one of the guilty, may have escaped this because of his appointment as Lieutenant (6:145).

Action: Surprise cutting out Hermione: 1797. Parts of the story are told several times in the canon, and it is based on a true story, here enumerated. Captain Pigot, of the Hermione (32), was a brutal officer who flogged seamen for every trifle, causing the crew to mutiny. They killed the Captain and his officers, then took the Hermione into La Guayra on the Spanish Main, whereupon the Spanish refused to give her up. Edward Hamilton was Captain of the Surprise at the time, and in a daring raid he boarded the Hermione in Puerto Cabello harbor, killing 119 and wounding 97 with small losses on his side, though Capt. Hamilton was "knocked about." Many mutineers in later years were caught and hung (6:147-148).

Dead & Wounded: Dead: 119 (not to mention the original officers). Wounded: 97

Boarded: Lethargy, Stephen's sloth, initially pegged as a vampire by some of the crew, including Jack (6:149).

Debauched: Lethargy, the sloth, because Jack made friends with him by feeding him alcohol. Stephen is incensed (6:154).

"There you are, my dear Stephen,' he cried." Jack has just received several letters from Sophia at Rio, and some porter from some Franciscans (6:156).

Payment: Jack Aubrey learns he has been awarded an ex-gratia payment for the Spanish treasure in the amount of £9755. This will nearly clear him of debt (6:157).

"Not a bit, not a bit. Even from the service point of view, there is not a moment to be lost." Jack to Stephen, who is complaining about Jack worrying about Linois' squadron when it is 10,000 miles away (6:159).

Disembarked: Lethargy, left with the Irish Franciscans at Rio to drink altar wine (6:166).

Sick Bay Report: Aboard Surprise. Three year old pork in Case 113 caused dysentery and two pneumonia cases (6:166). Other bruises from the storm aboard Surprise: One man flung against the fluke of an anchor, one man pitched head-first through the fore-hatch, one man contrived to impale himself on his own marlinspike (6:173).

Dead: Woods, elderly seaman, of pneumonia (6:174-175).

Injured: Mr Stanhope's servant, badly burned by a spirit stove while drunk, then shattered as he fell against a gun (6:176).

Duel: Mr. Atkins, jealous of Stephen, observes his inept practice with pistols aboard ship (because of Stephen's wounds from torture) and decides he might successfully quarrel with Stephen once they reach shore (6:181).

"'Why, there you are, Stephen,' cried Jack. 'You are come home, I find." Stephen has spent some time ashore at Bombay (7:197).

Dead: Mr. James, of the 87th Foot, killed by Captain Macfarlane, in an accounting of the goings on at Bombay. This was likely the result of a duel (7:199).

Married: Cecilia Williams, hastily, to a militia officer. Also married: Frances Williams, to this officer's older cousin, Sir Oliver Floode, a member of Parliament (7:201).

Expecting: Cecilia Williams (7:201).

Proposal: Stephen Maturin proposes to Diana Villiers in Bombay, where she is living with Richard Canning, who is away for the moment (7:229).

Injured: Bonden, by boiling tar dripped on his forearm (7:234).

Dead: Dil Stephen's small friend he'd met on shore, robbed of her six bangles, a set of silver bracelets, then murdered. There is no one of her caste available to bury her, so Stephen buys her corpse and enough wood to make her funeral pyre (7:237).

Illness: Babbington, probably the pox (8:244).

Dead: Fidge, of yellow fever in 1797, Lieutenant of Surprise when Jack was a midshipman, as accounted by Jack aboard Surprise (8:250).

"Lose not a minute' was engraved on his heart." Jack spies the sails of the Seringapatam ahead (8:253).

Injured: Theobald, master of the Seringapatam, an Indiaman, and formerly of the Orion. An accounting of his managing to blow off his leg, which cost him his Royal Navy career. He obviously knows Killick from the past, and reports Admiral Linois far from his real station (8:256-7).

Dead: His Excellency, Mr. Stanhope, the King's Representative, at Pulo Batak. The sea voyage had been hard on him with acute sea-sickness. He also had gout. He grew weaker, would not eat, had a fever—his illness, surely more than sea sickness, is described in terms of symptoms. The Surprise pulls in at Pulo Batak, a watering place, to get Mr. Stanhope to shore off the heaving ship. The anchoring with a fast tide is tricky. Stephen was within minutes of operating, though there we do not know what he was hoping to find, when Mr. Stanhope died, his mission, and therefore that of the Surprise, unfulfilled (8:272).

"...his beloved captain's motto was Lose not a minute." Midshipman Church, intent on eating as much as possible aboard the well-furnished Lushington, an Indiaman (8:277).

Action: Surprise encounters Linois' squadron headed for the Indiamen fleet. Jack decides to lead them away, if he can. The French squadron consists of Marengo (74), the flagship, Berceau (22), Sémillante (36) with twelve pounders, Belle Poule (40), with eighteen pounders, and an unnamed brig. The squadron spreads out in an attempt to capture Surprise. Jack pretends to be going as fast as he can, but has a drag sail out to slow him down. At a crucial moment he drops the drag sail, turns, and sails between the French ships, very reminiscent of his action against Linois in the Sophie years ago (which failed.) Berceau, the small corvette, is the closest ship and comes directly onto Surprise's broadside, which pounds the Berceau very badly. Surprise pretends to be more wounded than she really is, and escapes as night falls (9:282-296).

Dead or Wounded: Several men on the deck of the Berceau, the French corvette and member of Linois' squadron. The Surprise shoots grape shot, "knocking down a dozen men" (9:296).

Wounded: Mr. Callow, midshipman, "hit on the head," in this case literally, as a block fell on him. He has a concussion and Stephen declines to use the trephine on him (9:297).

Wounded: William Jenkins, one of three splinter wounds recorded in the action against Berceau. The two-foot long splinter nearly punctured an artery, in which case he surely would have bled to death (9:298).

Wounded: John Saddler, a scalp wound from a splinter. One other unnamed man had his forearm laid open by a splinter. Mr. White, the parson, fainted when asked to hold the scalp up while Stephen worked (6:299).

"We have no time to lose." Jack to the Indiamen captains, attempting to rally them to his plan of deception, with the French forming only a few miles away (9:303).

Action: Surprise and a fleet of Indiamen against Admiral Linois. After the Surprise fails in its attempt to lead the French squadron astray, Aubrey convinces the Indiamen to disguise themselves as Men of War in an attempt to fool Linois. He dispatches officers to each of several strong-looking Indiamen, who are, in fact, lightly armed, and gives several Indiamen Royal Navy officers' coats to complete the disguise. Jack's strategy is based on his assumption that the French are low on stores such as spare spars, therefore if they can inflict heavy damage to the rigging, the French may break off the engagement. They face off with the Indiamen in a taut line of 16 ships and wait for the French, who have control of the engagement with the weather gage. On the first try at engagement it is nearing nightfall. The British ships execute maneuvers very well, adding to the illusion they are Men of War. Linois breaks off the engagement at the last minute.

The engagement starts again the next day. Linois, in the Marengo, a ship-of-the-line with 74 guns, decides to break through the British line to split it in half between Hope and Cumberland, so Aubrey is forced to get out of line and take him on with the Surprise, a mere 28 gun frigate. He must get as close as he can to Linois, and take a beating while getting there, to have his carronades have any effect at short range. Marengo begins to fire on Surprise with accuracy and speed, a broadside every two minutes, but with his lower deck port lids closed because of the weather, thus it is 18 guns to 14, though Linois' guns are very much larger. The Surprise intends to cut across the Marengo's bow firing with the short-range carronades. Finally they are close enough and fire many broadsides into the Marengo, but that ship intended to run over Surprise, which was, of course, much smaller. With the Surprise in extreme danger, the Royal George, Ocean, and Dorset, are closing in on the other side. Faced with the overwhelming number of ships the French break off the engagement and sail away (9:320-329).

Dead: Harrowby, cut in two by a cannonball from Marengo. He was later put over the side to clear the deck (9:323).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey, a loose 36 pound shot caught him in the ankle and brought him down (9:324).

Dead & Wounded: Bonden. His left arm "sprung." He declared that Carlow copped it (9:325).

Dead and Wounded: Aboard Marengo, the scuppers ran with blood, "a slaughterhouse forward." Number unknown (9:326).

Dead: Aboard Surprise: Harrowby, Carlow, and one other (9:329).

Wounded: Scores (9:329).

Condition of the Ship: Surprise: 8 feet, three inches of water in the well. Seven guns dismantled, four ports beat into one, boats destroyed, masts cut almost on two, splinters knee deep in the waist, 24 pound balls lodged deep, holes in the bulwarks, sails shredded. The Surprise would sink within the hour. Carpenters from the Indiamen fleet do what they can to keep Surprise afloat, and she sails on her own back to Bombay (9:329).

"Lose not a moment: you may knit your wedding dress aboard." Jack in a letter to Sophia, hoping to meet her in Madeira and to marry her there (10:336).

Dead: Bowes, a head wound. He survived until the crew got to Bombay, where they buried him (10:331-2).

Prize: More like an award for his saving the huge fleet, Jack is asked by Canning to transport a significant amount of jewelry back to England, for a hefty commission (10:343).

Duel: Richard Canning walks in on Stephen Maturin and Diana Villiers in close embrace. An argument ensues where Stephen lets it be known that Canning's wife is on the way. Canning slaps Stephen hard across the face, thus setting up a duel. Neither man will back down. Stephen decides to wound Canning in the arm to end the matter. The two exchange pistol fire at twenty paces the next day (10:340-347).

Wounded: Stephen Maturin, of a pistol wound inflicted by Canning during their duel. The shot struck and cracked Stephen's third rib before cutting across the sternum where it lodged deeply (10:347). Stephen later extracted the bullet himself, with Jack reluctantly assisting (10:353).

Dead: Richard Canning, of a pistol wound inflicted by Stephen, whose plan to only wound Canning failed when he missed his aim (10:347).

Illness: Stephen Maturin, in a high fever recovering from his wound for several days. Subsequently he is quite restless and short with the crew (10:358+).

Discovered: An unknown and very large tortoise on a remote and uninhabited island. Stephen names it testudo aubreii, and this discovery seems to cure him of his pervading ill will (10:262).

Illness: The inevitable seamen's diseases brought on by their visit to Calcutta, likely poxes (11:364).

Proposal Refused: Stephen receives a note from Diana when they arrive at Madeira, with his ring enclosed. She has sailed with Johnstone (subsequently known as "Harry Johnson"), an American, and they are to be married. Stephen walks into the wilderness and buries the ring. Jack is also quite disappointed. He had sent a letter asking Sophia to be transported to Madeira to meet him, but she is nowhere to be found (11:371).

Action: Surprise finds a sail and closes, hoping for a Frenchman. It is the Euryalus, which had not seen Surprise sneaking up on her. Miller, her captain, is angry and orders Jack to seek out the Ethalion behind him and tell her to keep up (11:375-7).

Aboard: Ethalion's Captain is now Heneage Dundas. The ship signals there are two women aboard, one young. Sophia Williams had received the message and was traveling to Madeira to meet Jack, along with an older maid. Jack suggests they marry immediately, but Sophia insists they wait until they get home (11:237).

Notes:

- This could be HMS Goliath, misspelled.
 In subsequent books "Waring" changes to "Warren"

4: The Mauritius Command

Ship Losses: Reported in the Naval Chronicle for a one year period. Jupiter (50); Leda (38), Crescent (36), Flora (32), Meleager (36), Astraea (32), Banterer (22), Laurel (22) (taken). There is no mention of actual casualties here, though there must have been many, The Laurel was "lost" by being taken by the French. Presumably there were some survivors in that encounter. The others are all listed as "wrecked" (1:38).

Five of the ships above are frigates, with the Jupiter being larger. If we assume the ships' complements are average, as reported in "The World of Jack Aubrey" (by David Miller, Running Press, 2003, p. 11), then we have potential losses of:

Jupiter (50), 4 th rate	crew: 350-420
Leda (38), frigate	crew: 215-294
Cresecent (36), frigate	crew: 215-294
Flora (32), frigate	crew: 215-294
Meleager (36), frigate	crew: 215-294
Astrea (32), frigate	crew: 215-294
Banterer (22), post ship:	crew: 121-195

Married: Jack and Sophia, sometime after Jack gives up the Surprise, but before The Mauritius Command, 'between books.' They have also purchased Ashgrove Cottage.

Born: Twin daughters, Charlotte and Frances to Jack and Sophia. They are depicted as not yet talking and with no teeth, therefore they are somewhat less than a year old. Jack therefore has to have been on ashore a year or two at least, and he is on half pay (1:15).

Lost: The Williams family money, including the dowries of the three girls of £10,000 apiece, in a scheme that was to yield 17.5%. Mapes is mortgaged with the rent paying the interest (1:34).

Illness: Charles Loveless The original Captain of the Boadicea. An "obstinate tenesmus" causes him to be on shore, and Jack Aubrey takes his place, at the urging of Stephen. A "tenesmus," according to "A Sea of Words," is "A continual but ineffectual urge to void the contents of bowels or bladder, accompanied by straining." (3rd edition, p. 435). It is clear in context that Stephen did not think Captain Loveless was the appropriate commander from a political point of view and it is clear that he manipulated the situation to get Jack Aubrey appointed as Captain instead. There is also the faint implication that Stephen may have exacerbated Loveless' illness (1:44). By this time in the canon we know that Stephen is quite capable of using his powers for discomfiture, as he did to the midshipmen who ate his experimental rats in the previous novel, HMS Surprise. Also, Loveless' predicament does sound very much like he had been administered a laxative. It is certainly possible this did take place, but there is no overt support for this in the text itself (1:40-1).

Loose: Four new French frigates, to be based in Mauritius for the purpose of preying on Indiamen. Venus (40), Manche (40), Bellone (40), and Caroline (40). Intelligence gleaned by Stephen (1:45).

Posted: Jack Aubrey, to HMS Boadicea (38) (1:48).

"to lose not a moment below, there." Jack motivating his household to get him ready for sea (1:48).

"but on the King's service he must not lose a minute." Jack to Lady Clonfert urging her punctuality if he is to transport her to the Cape. Jack does not like women aboard a Man-of-War. He manages to "miss" her (1:50).

Action: Boadicea takes Hébé. The account is dictated to his clerk by Jack. We do not have an account of the action directly. The Hébé, with a prize, attempted to avoid capture in shallows and struck a reef. She was taken by the Boadicea's boats. The prize, the Intrepid Fox, turns out to be loaded with gold dust and other valuable cargo (2:52).

Dead: Captain of the Hébé, French frigate, killed in action when the Hébé successfully took the Intrepid Fox, a British merchantman, just prior to encountering the Boadicea (2:52).

Wounded: James Arklow, ordinary seaman, and William Bates, a Marine, were listed as "slightly wounded" in Jack's letter to the Admiralty recounting the Boadicea's taking of Hébé (2:53).

Wounded: Lt. Bretonnière, acting commander of the Hébé, patched up by Stephen. No notion of what the wounds were, although Jack called him a "poor fellow" in a letter to Sophia (2:55).

Prize: Hyaena, (the renamed Hébé) and Intrepid Fox. Lt Lemuel Akers is the prizemaster, his promotion assured (2:52).

"...no one is allowed to set foot upon these rocks, on the grounds that not a minute is to be lost." Stephen to Jack, who has delayed his re-capture of an English vessel so he can qualify for salvage money. Stephen noticed the delay, but did not understand the purpose (2:57).

Promoted: Mr. Seymour to 1st Lieutenant, because Mr. Akers is taking in the prize, and Johnson, from Master's Mate to Acting Lieutenant, by Jack Aubrey (2:62-3).

Dead: a suckling pig, one of the "few casualties aboard the Hébé" (2:66), prepared by the captured French cook and eaten by the officers of Boadicea (2:66).

Dead: Turnball, Harry, 1st Lieutenant killed at the Nile, as related by Jack Aubrey aboard Boadicea (2:73).

Dead & Wounded: Several from the Agamemnon in an action attempting to take a privateer by Jack in one set of boats and Lord Clonfert in the other. Lord Clonfert's boats shied away from the action and did not participate, though he later took credit. This is the first time we are made aware of Clonfert's character (2:74).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey. Both a "rap on the head" and "scored across the ribs" by grapeshot (2:75).

Court Martial: Lord Clonfert was court martialed and dismissed the service for striking a fellow officer. He was later reinstated but lost seniority (2:76).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey. A dull blue scar across the back from an old wound, which Stephen notices (2:80).

"Ah, there you are, Doctor,' cried Jack." As Stephen comes on deck as they are sailing into port at the Cape (3:82).

Injured: Francis, a popular topman, who fell from the maintopgallant trunk, and into the sea, hitting the number 12 portlid on the way. His "thoracic cage" is severely injured (3:82).

Illness: A man in an alcoholic coma, bleeding at the ears (3:96).

Promoted: Jack Aubrey, from Post Captain to Commodore, a temporary position (3:100).

Promoted: Johnson, from Acting Lieutenant to Lieutenant, confirmed by Admiral Bertie (3:102).

Transferred: Jack transfers his command to Raisonable as flagship of the squadron and raises his pendant for the first time. Captain Eliot takes control of Boadicea (3:104).

"Lose not a minute, as you would put it." Stephen to Jack encouraging him to attack Saint Paul's (4:133).

Illness: Lord Clonfert, suffers pain from a "clonic spasm." Stephen prescribes an enema. The real issue, however, is psychological stress brought on particularly by Jack Aubrey, who checked him for arguing. Lord Clonfert does not get along very well with several of the Captains, including Corbett and Pym, and most especially Jack, of whom Lord Clonfert is quite jealous (4:140).

Action: Attack on St. Paul. With Raisonable as the flag ship, the squadron attacks St. Paul. Ships involved include Boadicea (38), under Captain Eliot, Néréide (36), under Captain Robert Corbett, Sirius (38), under Captain Pym, and Otter (18), under Captain Lord Clonfert. The landing parties, under Lieutenant Colonel Keating, were aboard the Néréide and land at Pointes des Galets several miles outside the town. Their goal was to take the three shore-based batteries guarding the town: Lambousière, La Centière, and La Neuve. They quickly take the first two and turn the guns on the Caroline, a French frigate defending the town along with a captured Indiaman and several smaller boats. Caroline is close in to the shore and fires at the landing party as well as Raisonable. Boadicea anchors next to the Caroline and fires on her, the remaining battery, and a captured Indiaman. The other ships fire in support. Caroline and La Neuve both haul their colors and the battle is over (4:149-152). Many of the French had run for the hills. It was expected they were to re-group and attack the British, but this did not happen (see below).

Destroyed: La Lambousière (battery), destroyed by Lord Clonfert (4:152). Later on Clonfert destroys the tax records office and also a half million pounds worth of silk belonging to the Indiaman Streatham, a grave mistake (4:156). The other batteries are also destroyed, along with 120 guns, and the French naval yard is sacked of all usable material (4:158).

Wounded: Three men down on Raisonable, unnamed (4:150).

Wounded: Half the crew of the Caroline, including the Captain. As the Caroline is a 40 gun frigate, if we assume the same complement as English ships, she had a crew of between 200 and 300 men. 100 to 150 wounded (4:153).

Dead: General Desbrusleys, commandant of the French troops, by a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head, because of military setbacks, but also because of marriage problems. As a result, the French surrender entirely to Commodore Aubrey (4:157).

Wounded: We do not have an exact accounting of the British wounded in this battle. Other than the three unnamed men above the casualties are described as "moderate" (4:158).

Transferred: Captain Corbett is offered command of the captured Caroline, renamed the Bourbonnaise, and sent to the Cape with dispatches. This is an attempt by Aubrey of getting him out of the picture in hopes of improving relations between the captains of the squadron (4:158).

Promoted: Captain Lord Clonfert, from Master & Commander of the Otter to Post Captain in Corbett's old ship, the Néréide. Lieutenant Tomkinson, 1st Lieutenant of the Otter, is made Master and Commander of the Otter to take Clonfert's place (4:158).

Prizes: The Caroline, two Indiamen, Europe and Streathem, plus half a dozen smaller vessels (5:162).

Escaped: The Russian sloop Diana, escapes from the Cape, as hoped for and planned by Admiral Bertie (5:162).

Prizes: The French ships Vénus and Manche, which were not at Port Louis, captured the East Indiamen Windham, United Kingdom, and Charlton. The Bellone, which had slipped past the blockade, captured Victor (18) and Minerva (52), as reported by the Wasp (5:174).

Transferred: Jack switches his pendant back to the Boadicea (5:174).

Illness: A seaman aboard the Néréide with an inoperable tumor pushing on his brain exhibits strange speech patterns (5:189).

Bribes: Stephen and Bonden go ashore from the Grappler to La Reunion with many gold coins to be used to gather intelligence. They come back with a case of coffee, a new grinder, and information about French reinforcements on the way (5:194).

Sick Bay Report: The squadron encounters a hurricane which causes a steady number of injuries. A seaman has cracked ribs from the flying spokes of the ship's wheel. A reefer dashed senseless against the hances. Mr. Peter, who fell through the hatchway, injuries unnamed. More ribs and broken limbs, fractured clavicles, count not given. Two men dazed from lightning (5:195).

Dead: one man with a lightning burn, unnamed (5:195).

Damage: Boadicea: Fore and main topmasts gone. Magicienne: mizzen mast gone. Sirius: all topmasts gone (5:196).

Injured: Lt. Trollope, limping (5:197).

Pregnant: Mr. Collins' girlfriend (6:200).

"There you are, Stephen,' he cried." Jack to Stephen, who is about to show him an unborn porcupine (6:202).

Injured or III: 3 men, objects for invaliding on the Iphigenia, as reported by Capt. Lambert (6:205).

Acquitted: At Court Martial, Captain Woolcombe, for the loss of the Laurel (22), captured by the far more powerful Cannonière (6:208).

Dead: Admiral John Byng, executed by firing squad on the quarterdeck of his own ship, in 1757, blamed for the loss of Minorca to the French the previous year. The subject came up in the course of a wide ranging argument on capital punishment at dinner immediately after the available captains had tried and acquitted Captain Woolcomb for the loss of the Laurel (6:211).

Dead: a man executed "for cause" aboard the Ramillies when Jack Aubrey was a midshipman, related by Jack, who states he became sick after the event (6:212).

Action: An invasion fleet including 14 transports plus the men of war takes on La Reunion. The Sirius with a thousand men heads for a landing at Grande Chaloupe between Saint-Denis and St Paul's while Jack with several ships stays off the town of Sainte-Marie. Néréide and Lord Clonfert attempt to land boats on shore, but the heavy surf causes them trouble. Jack tells Lt. Pullings, Captain of the transport ship Groper, to use his ship as a breakwater so the boats can land protected, but the ship is dashed onto the beach. The men ashore spoiled most of their powder, but the French ran off toward Saint-Denis without a serious fight, the other landing having been more successful. Stephen sets of in Magicienne for the other landing. They find Colonel Fraser's troops well deployed and ready to start a battle to rout the French troops deployed to defend Saint-Denis. However, Stephen manages to parlay with the French commander, and the French surrender, much to the dismay and the horror of the British troops, who are deprived of a much-sought battle (6:224-233).

Dead: Four men in the surf at Saint-Marie, due to capsizing boats (6:227).

Installed: As Governor of La Reunion, Mr. Farquhar, the British envoy who has been traveling with the British squadron (7:234).

"I shall echo the Commodore's words, gentlemen,' said Mr. Farquhar, 'and cry "Lose not a moment"." On the plan to immediately attack Mauritius (7:234).

Rescued and Injured: Stephen Maturin, who falls into the sea while attempting to board the Néréide. Two ribs cracked, stunned, and inflammation of the lungs (7:240).

Action: Ile de la Passe (1). In the first phase Stephen is aboard Néréide with Lord Clonfert as they catch up with the Sirius under Captain Pym, which has just single-handedly taken the French fort at Pointe du Diable, much to the dismay of Clonfert, who wanted to be a part of any action. Pym has managed to capture the French signal book in this short action. Pym directs Clonfert to garrison the Fort and leaves to sail to Port Louis on the other side of the island. Clonfert proceeds to consolidate the Fort, blow up additional installations in the area, and fight small battles with French troops along the countryside. Meanwhile, Stephen distributes subversive literature (7:245-49).

Dead: Capt Pym's cousin, in the Sirius' action to take a fortified island near Pointe du Diable (7:247).

Dead: a "row of hammocks" awaiting burial at sea from the same action above. No numbers are given (7:247).

Dead: French soldiers who had tried to hold the island. Pym's men had blasted holes in the coral for the "dead soldiers." Again, no numbers are given, but the scene is described as a "bloody mess" (7:248). The garrison had been about 100 soldiers with two officers (7:247). Although Stephen asked about prisoners, there is no follow up to this, nor of the wounded.

Action: The Ile de la Passe (2) Most of the crew of the Néréide are ashore when a French squadron appears off Port South-East: Victor, Minerve, Bellone, and two captured Indiamen: Ceylon and Windham. The nearby Fort is also without leadership as the French ships begin to draw into the harbor. With Néréide and the fort flying false French colors (and knowing the French signals), they let the first corvette, the Victor, through the narrows before Néréide opens fire, causing Victor to strike almost immediately. With the stronger frigates vulnerable in the strait the crew of the fort wind up botching the entire exercise, miss the French ships, and fire wildly. Victor uses the confusion to escape. Minerve and Bellone, who know the tight navigation of the narrow passage perfectly, batter the Fort and maneuver to take on Néréide (7:251+).

Dead: a man in Néréide's gig as he is nearing the Victor to take possession, from a cannonball fired from the Fort (7:254).

Dead and wounded: scattered about the flagstaff and the dismounted guns of the Fort. No number given. These soldiers died not as a result of enemy action, but of their own mistakes (7:254).

Action: Ile de la Passe (3). Having neutralized the Fort for the moment and damaged Néréide, four of the five French ships (minus the Windham) anchor close to shore, with dangerous shoals all about. Clonfert sends for reinforcements, and after a couple of days Pym's Sirius comes quickly through the strait and bids Clonfert follow, only to bash into a coral reef. It takes a day to get her off, and by that time they are joined by Iphigenia and Magicenne. All four ships head into the harbor, only to have Sirius run aground a second time, followed aground soon after by the Magicenne. In the heat of the battle it's Néréide against Bellone and Victor, Iphegenia against Minerve. The grounded Magicenne takes on Ceylon, the Indiaman, which strikes her colors. Next the Minerve attempts to get away, as does the Ceylon, which rams the Bellone. All three of these ships are suddenly on shore and aground, though the Bellone can still fire a broadside. The Néréide is kept under intense fire, with a lull during the night, then again the next day. The Bellone kept up fire, even though Néréide had struck. It turns out the British colors had been nailed to the mast. Finally Clonfert, by this time badly wounded, cut the mast down, and so surrendered. Meanwhile Iphigenia is the only frigate left floating after Sirius and Magicenne are blown up. She takes several days trying to get out of the harbor, only to find several French frigates offshore. Stephen uses a small boat to escape (7:258-266).

Dead: 1st Lieutenant and three army officers aboard Néréide (7:263).

Illness: McAdam, surgeon of Néréide, in an alcoholic coma during the battle (7:263).

Wounded: Stephen estimates half the ship's company have passed through his hands (7:264) and later counts 150 total (7:266).

Dead: Stephen counts 27 of the 150 wounded dead, and has hopes for a hundred of them, and 70 or so killed outright on deck (7:266).

Wounded: Lord Clonfert, one eye torn out and his face slashed and teeth shattered, by grapeshot, neck ripped open to expose the carotid artery, from a splinter wound (7:264).

Dead: the Purser and the Bosun of Néréide (7:266).

Wounded: The gunner, on the forearm, a splinter wound (7:266).

Blown Up: Magicenne, while stuck on a reef, with nine feet of water in her hold, intentionally. She was badly damaged and would have sunk had she been pulled from the reef (7:267).

Blown Up: Sirius, the next day, after repeated attempts to get her off her reef as well, intentionally (7:268).

"Why, Stephen, there you are!' cried Jack," Stephen must tell Jack the attack on Port South-East has failed (7:270).

Taken: Néréide and Iphigenia (7:270).

Action: HMS Africaine vs. Iphigenia & Astrée. Capt. Corbett, now in the Africaine returning from his mission to the Cape, encounters a schooner off Le Reunion and suffers casualties. While off-loading his wounded the (now French) Iphigénie, and Astrée take him on. The news travels overland via Col. Fraser. Boadicea, Staunch, and Otter, sail to intercept the coming mêlée. Aubrey is four miles away by the next day with no breeze as he watches Africaine engage, but be overpowered. Even after she strikes her colors the French continue to pound her. All her masts go by the board. With Staunch and Otter fallen behind out of sight Boadicea engages and damages Iphigénie and is in turn slightly damaged by Astrée. As Staunch and Otter finally catch up Jack decides they should finish off Iphigénie and leave Astrée to him, but Astrée, a faster ship that can sail closer to the wind, leaves the scene towing Iphigénie. Rather than get involved in a long chase, Boadicea then re-takes Africaine, and tows her to St. Paul's (8:280+).

Wounded: Probably 25 in the first Africaine encounter with the schooner. We're not told exactly, only that Col. Keating gave Africaine 25 men as replacements for the wounded (8:281).

Dead: The Master, Mr. Buchan, cut in two by a shot from Astrée. His body is thrown overboard (8:286).

Wounded: Herold, upper arm, aboard the Africaine (9:291).

Wounded: On Boadicea, three: two splinter wounds and Tom Colley, with a depressed cranial fracture (8:288). Stephen and Cotton use a trephine on him and fill the hole with a 3 shilling piece (9:296-9).

Boadicea: 4 shot holes only, damage to sails and rigging, 8 inches in the well (8:288).

Iphigénie: Mauled enough by Boadicea that the Astree passed her a towline and fled the scene.

Dead: Capt. Corbett. The first time we have an inkling of his death is when the remaining Africaines claim not to know what happened to him. (8:292) Later on the Africaine's surgeon, Mr. Cotton, confirms his death and explains that Corbett, wounded in the foot, went back on deck and was shot a second time. The clear implication is that he was shot by his own men and then tossed overboard, though Cotton places enough leeway in his telling to be able to claim he said otherwise (9:294).

Dead and wounded: Aboard Africaine, a "shocking number" of deaths. The French killed 49 outright and took 50 prisoners. Sixty or 70 wounded remained. John Bates, foot amputation (9:293-294). Tullidge, 1st Lt., wounded four times, Forder, 2nd Lt., bullet through the lungs. Parker, Officer, head shot off (9:295).

"Dr Maturin could be restored to the frigate without the loss of a moment." After Stephen discovers the Venus attacking the Bombay, Boadicea is in pursuit (9:308).

Rescued and Injured: Stephen Maturin, in attempting to board Boadicea at sea from the Pearl. He is caught in the rigging of both ships, then falls to the sea. He suffers barnacle scrapes and bruises (9:308).

"There is not a moment to lose,' cried Stephen, starting up." Stephen urging Jack to get to the scene of the fighting (9:309).

Action: Stephen and Bonden are in the Pearl, a small avisio, when they observe the Bombay (26), a converted Indiaman, encounter the French frigate Vénus, along with the French corvette Victor. There are several separate engagements. By the time Boadicea closes on the scene Vénus has taken the Bombay, with damage to both ships. The Vénus was severely damaged in the fight and cannot properly maneuver. Jack takes advantage of this, sweeps her deck with grape shot, and boards her with a crew of Africaines bent on revenge and some of his own men. After a furious battle on deck the Vénus strikes her colors (9:318-321).

Dead: Hamelin, French Commodore, of grapeshot through the heart (9:321), many French officers (9:320).

Wounded: There is no accounting for the other dead and wounded, though in a battle this severe there must have been many. Jack does say, "We have come off scot-free or very near" (9:322), but that is as close as we get to an accounting.

Illness: Trollope, of sunstroke and a black blacksmith, carried away, while making the squadron ready for sea (10:323).

Dead: An English colonel aboard Bombay, in the action with Vénus (10:325).

Arrived: Admiral Bertie with an armada, taking over the final invasion of Mauritius from Jack's squadron, thus sharing in the spoils after letting Jack and his men do all the work (10:329).

Born: "At Ashgrove Cottage, Chilton Admiral, in Hants, the lady of Captain Aubrey, of the Boadicea, of a son and heir." George Aubrey. Told to Jack by Tom Pullings, a notice in the Naval Chronicle (10:331).

Dead: Hobson, Master's Mate, from the Néréide (10:341).

Wounded: Mr. Lomax, midshipman of Néréide, one leg amputated. Another midshipman with an arm amputated. These two men had apparently been taken prisoner and operated on by the French, liberated when the English gained control of the port (10:342).

Wounded: Lt. Yeo, an officer with a bandage on his face. He is from the Néréide. We know this only because Stephen had left his bolster, made of Dodo feathers, aboard when he vacated the vessel during the very first lle de la Passe engagement (10:343).

Dead: Capt Clonfert. Self inflicted. He ripped off the bandage on his neck, thereby bleeding to death, rather than face Jack Aubrey, who simply wanted to call on him to wish a speedy recovery (10:345).

Ordered Home: Jack Aubrey, to take home news of the victory, a plum assignment given by Admiral Bertie, after Stephen plants false impressions of Jack's family's influence, causing the Admiral to treat Jack more carefully (10:348).

Table 4-4: Met or mentioned elsewhere in The Mauritius Command

Notes:

1. Jack tells Stephen that Narborough is, in fact, Garron, who has inherited the title. Garron, says Jack, was 3rd Lieutenant on Surprise. (7:238) Actually, Garron was aboard the Lively.

5: Desolation Island

Posted: Jack Aubrey, to the Sea Fencibles, a kind of citizen's militia organization intended to resist a potential French invasion. He was given this position when he returned from Mauritius (1:5).

Married: Preserved Killick. Actually, he purchased a wife, at least temporarily. The Aubrey household insists they be properly married immediately (1:9).

Returned: Diana Villiers, to England, because her pending marriage to Johnson was postponed because he was already married. She is seeing Stephen again (1:11).

Awarded: to Jack Aubrey, the Ribbon of Bath, as seen in a portrait of Jack at Ashgrove Cottage (1:14).

Illness: Mrs. Williams, treated by Dr. Lettsome and Sir James, who both extract a hefty fee from Aubrey. The sense is that this illness is hysterical in nature (1:14-16).

Posted: To HMS Leopard (50), Jack Aubrey. 1056 Tons, complement of 343 (1:19).

Injured: Peter Heywood, by Killick, who pours boiling jam sauce on him while aboard Lively. Heywood, now a Post-Captain, was a midshipman aboard HMS Bounty who wound up with the mutineers. He was initially condemned, but then pardoned. Recounted by Jack to Sophia and Stephen. Jack intends to get Heywood to tell him about Bligh before Jack has to take the Leopard to Australia, where Bligh is a governor (1:23).

Dead: Three Bounty mutineers, by hanging from the yardarm of Brunswick, as seen by Jack when he was a midshipman aboard Tonnant, as recounted by Jack (1:23).

Deceived: Jack Aubrey, by Kimber, a charlatan who convinces Jack through trickery that he can smelt silver out of lead left over in tailings left by the Romans, for a fee (1:25).

Dead: John Deering, a naturalist, under Stephen's knife during an operation. There is some sense that Stephen's addiction to laudanum may have affected his abilities and helped cause this death (1:27-1:39).

On Half Pay: Heneage Dundas, without a ship (1:29).

Stolen: Several fish from Stephen Maturin, near a bonfire lit by the crew of HMS Mentor, whose 1st Lieutenant they burned in effigy (1:31).

Lost: A great deal of money by Jack to the Wrays at cards (1:31-33).

Dead: Four seamen, accused Bounty mutineers. aboard Pandora, while in irons, while in a 4 by 6 yard pen holding 14 men called "Pandora's Box". The ship went aground, and the Captain did not bother opening the cages where the men were kept. A key was thrown to them. Some, including Heywood, escaped, while four drowned (1:38).

Arrested: Diana Villiers and Louisa Wogan, by the Crown, under suspicion of espionage. Diana was arrested because she agreed to carry letters for Louisa Wogan, which were actually intelligence reports bound for America. She claims she thought they were because of an assignation of some sort and is released. This prompts her to flee to America with Johnson, again. Wogan plea bargained to a sentence of transportation to Botany Bay, helped by influential people in government (2:43-45).

Challenge: Stephen Maturin challenges Admiral Sievright, in charge of intelligence, who has made unseemly remarks about Diana Villiers. The Admiral calls for a file of Marines as Stephen stalks out. Sir Joseph Blaine manages to smooth things over, and no duel is forthcoming (2:50).

Illness: Mr. Warren, the palsy. The soft-spoken man, head of intelligence, has been replaced by the blustery Admiral (2:52).

Affair: Louisa Wogan with the "D of C," which must be the Duke of Clarence, son of King George (and himself an Admiral). There are several other choices, but the Duke of Clarence is the only one that is a character in the canon. As related by Sir Joseph Blaine to Stephen as he tells him of Mrs. Wogan's intelligence activities as an American spy (2:57).

Challenge: Jack tells Stephen he accused Andrew Wray of cheating at cards. This normally would have resulted in a duel, but Stephen assures Jack that Wray will not fight him (2:62-3).

Dead: John Alexander, Superintendent of Convicts, murdered by several of them aboard Leopard, beaten with irons. Pullings says he was "scragged" (3:74).

"—why, there you are, Stephen." Jack is about to learn the convict's surgeon is dead (3:74).

Dead: William Simpson, Surgeon of Convicts, pitched forward onto his head and broke his neck. Pullings reports this is also a murder, though they had just emerged from a severe storm which could account for the surgeon's injuries (3:74).

Stowaway: Michael Herapath. He had attempted to join the crew, only to be turned away by Pullings. Later on we discover he has had a long term relationship with Louisa Wogan (3:75).

Dead: One rat, gravid, with fleas, killed by Louisa Wogan with her shoe (3:83).

Dead: A parson's son, who could not bear a life at sea as a crew member, as told by Jack (3:88).

Promoted: Michael Herapath, from stowaway to supernumerary landsman (3:89).

Illness: Severe seasickness among the 20 convicts (3:90).

Illness: Babbington, Venereal disease. Stephen recounts curing Babbington many times since the year 1800 and that Babbington's propensity for this sort of behavior had stunted his growth (3:99).

Aboard: Pollux, Babbington's Newfoundland (3:99).

Dead: Robert Smith and Edward Marno, of seasickness. They are buried at sea along with William Simpson and John Alexander (3:101).

Addiction: Stephen Maturin, to opium in the "tincture of laudanum." We learn of his ongoing problem beginning about (3:100) and continuing throughout the next few books.

Lost: Wager (24), with all hands. A reminisce. As a 24 gun frigate the ship had at least 120 hands (3:103).

Illness: Mrs. Hoath, a convict passenger. Stephen predicts her early demise because of a "whole complication of morbid states" (3:105).

Pregnant: Salubrity Boswell, by her husband's brother. Her husband had previously been sentenced to transportation, so Mrs. Boswell got herself pregnant, then attacked, and apparently killed, the judge who sentenced him. Because she was pregnant she could not be hung, but was instead sentenced to "transportation," and thus able to join her husband, which was her original intent (3:106).

Sick Bay Report: After the storm: broken ribs, poxes, broken collar bones, contusions, crushed fingers, and poxes (3:106).

"Come, come,' he said, ignoring them, 'lose not a moment, I beg. I am come to exercise you, ma'am; to air you for the good of your health. But there is not a moment to be lost." Stephen to Louisa Wogan (3:107).

Illness: Two convicts are ill with "curious symptoms," Stephen cannot figure out. He treats with the blue pill and the black draught (3:107).

Illness: Two male rats, indisposed (3:107).

"Come, come, there is not a moment to be lost." Stephen to Louisa Wogan again, trying to get her below before quarters (3:111).

"There you are, Stephen,' he cried." Jack sends Stephen to the stern before a session with Lt. Turnbull where he checks him savagely for misconduct (3:112).

Flogged: The Turk, nine lashes for stealing tobacco (3:120).

Rescued and Injured: Herapath, fell from the yardarm. Jack fished him out (4:122). We later learn that his hands are badly torn and he may have a concussion (4:136), and still later that he has some broken ribs from the incident (4:137).

Dead: Capt Deering and half the crew of the Phoebe (36), of yellow fever when stationed off the Leeward islands, as related by a letter from Jack to Sophia (4:127).

Dead and wounded: A score of American seamen aboard USS Chesapeake, when fired upon by Leopard in 1807, as related by Stephen (4:131). We get a fuller accounting later on (10:301).

Affairs: Mrs. Wogan is said to have had affairs with several high-ranking members of government, including G. Hammond, Sir Francis Burdett, Lord Breadalbane, and a lay Lord of the Admiralty. As related to Stephen by Sir Joseph Blaine (4:133).

Illness: Three in sick bay, very ill, of an unknown cause (4:135).

Illness: Jackruski, in an alcoholic coma. Six other Leopards, too drunk to stand (4:135).

"The bell! The bell! Come, there is not a moment to be lost." Stephen to Louisa Wogan (4:140).

Dead: The three patients above finally exhibit the symptoms of Gaol Fever and fall into a coma. By the next morning they are dead (4:144).

Dead: 14 convicts, two turnkeys, a loblolly boy, Needham, Jack's clerk, all from Gaol Fever (5:148).

Illness: Lt. Pullings, possibly with Gaol Fever, though Stephen is at this point unsure. Also Mr. Martin shows symptoms. And Roberts is to be dosed (5:149).

Dead: a "range of bodies" sewn in hammocks, were buried at sea. No numbers are attached (5:149).

Dead: Many more, buried by Reverend Fisher. Stephen is reduced to placebos (5:150).

Dead: Paul Martin, several days later. He had taken notes of his illness as it ran its course, and had in fact survived it, only to die of pneumonia (5:150).

Dead: 3 more. The epidemic is waning (5:152).

Dead: Jack reports he has three vacancies for midshipmen (5:153). James Stokes is one of them (5:154).

Promoted: Michael Herapath, from landsman to Midshipman in order to be Stephen's assistant (5:154).

Dead: A total of 116 men are discharged dead in the logbook. Three are named specifically: James Stokes, Master's Mate, William Macpherson, Lieutenant, Royal Marines, and Jacob Hawley, boy, third class (5:154).

Sick Bay Report: 65 men remain in sick bay. Only three convicts have survived. Stephen also reports swollen legs by the dozen and severe nervous symptoms, suggesting the onset of scurvy (5:155-6).

"I do not mean to lose a minute." Jack to Stephen on the necessity of his going ashore to see the Governor at Reciffe (5:165).

Illness: Ayliffe, a seaman left on shore in Brazil, along with Tom Pullings and several others (5:166).

Promoted: Mr. Grant to 1st Lieutenant. Mr. Babbington from 3rd to 2nd Lieutenant. Mr. Turnbull from 4th to 3rd lieutenant, and Mr. Byron, from Midshipman to Acting 4th Lieutenant (5:168).

Damaged: Nymph (32): in a run-in with the Dutch Waakzaamheid (74) and a storm, lost foremast, head "ahoo." She outran the larger ship and was refitting at Recife, as related by her Captain, Mr. Fielding (5:171-2).

Dead and Wounded: 149 out of 421 aboard Ardent (64) against Vrijheid, a Dutch ship at Camperdown, related by Jack, who was a midshipman on the lower deck of the Ardent at the time. Ardent was reduced to a "near wreck" (6:173).

Illness: Lt. Grant has tooth decay. Mr. Lane, the Bosun has ague, and the midshipmen's birth is entirely wormed (6:177).

Illness: Seven cases of Pox (syphilis), including Howlands, all recent cases. Since the crew has not been ashore, this points to Peggy Barnes, Mrs. Wogan's servant, as the likely cause (6:178).

"There is not a moment to be lost." Stephen to Michael Herapath, as the ship beats to quarters (6:182).

Injury: John Littleton, a hernia (6:183).

Affair: Mr. Wogan, "gone to bed to her maid." Herapath explaining to Stephen his relationship with Louisa Wogan (6:184).

Addiction: Herapath confesses to opium addiction and having broken it. Stephen quizzes him carefully (6:189-191).

Exorcised: A ghost who has taken up residence in the bowsprit netting, with holy water and blue lights, by Stephen, considered appropriate to the job because of his Catholicism and learning. Mrs. Boswell has been feeding the seaman tales, thus adding to their perception of the Leopard as an unlucky ship (6:193).

Dead: Stephen read obituaries in a Naval Chronicle as Jack talked of the Waakzaamheid: Francis Walwin Eves, midshipman on Thesus, Miss Home, Capt Carpenter, William Murray, surgeon, and Lt. John Griffiths (6:196).

Action: Leopard encounters Waakzaamheid: The first action involved identifying the ships to each other and an ineffectual broadside by the Waakzaamheid, after which it chased Leopard until darkness fell. The chaser cannon were fired from both ships. There was minor damage to the ship's rigging and sails. However, the larboard figurehead leopard's nose was knocked off in the engagement (6:203-204). The ships played cat and mouse for several days, shooting at each other for target practice, but with no real damage to either. They traveled several hundred miles in close proximity until a calm night when the Dutch ship launched a series of broadsides and at the same time launched boats from the opposite side intended to sneak around in the darkness and board the Leopard. The Leopard cut up the leading boats with grapeshot and escaped as the Waakzaamheid stopped to pick up the survivors (7:206-212).

Dead and wounded: There is no accounting, though the grapeshot from Leopard had to have taken a toll of both (7:211).

Dead: Lt. John Condom Howard, Royal Marines, murdered by Mr. Larkin, master, with a half-pike, when he was drunk. Buried at sea (7:215-6).

Action: Leopard chased by Waakzaamheid in heavy seas. As the Waakzaamheid closes on Leopard in extremely heavy seas, both ships use their chasers on each other when the waves do not intervene. Normally in a single ship action the idea is to take the other ship as a prize, but because of the heavy storm Aubrey realizes the intent of the Waakzaamheid is to destroy Leopard completely. Leopard's mizzen top is damaged and Jack orders water over the side in an attempt to increase speed. They trade shots long enough for Jack to smoke several cigars (used to set off the cannon). The ships are very close when the Waakzaamheid's foremast gives way, causing her to broach and sink (7:221-236).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey (1). Hit in the head by a splinter. Killick held his head while Stephen sewed up his scalp and placed a cloth around one ear, an eye, and his forehead. Stephen left to work on another wounded man (2), so Jack got up to return to the gun. He did not get out of the way fast enough, As the gun recoiled it knocked him down on the deck again (7:235-6). Stephen later declares the wound "spectacular, and it will spoil your beauty." We also find out that in addition to a concussion, (3) Jack has been wounded in the leg (8:238).

Dead: 600 men as the Waakzaamheid's foremast falls over the side, causing the Dutch 74 to broach. The next huge wave washes over her and she sinks immediately (7:236).

Born: To Mrs. Boswell, a girl, Leopardina, by caesarean section (8:239).

Pregnant: Mrs. Wogan, by Herapath, while aboard (8:239).

Action: Leopard hits the ice, which gouges a substantial hole beneath the water line, and destroys the rudder. She scrapes off the ice, then encounters additional stormy weather and loses several sails because the men are pumping rather than furling them against the wind. Water has completely filled the hold and is awash the Orlop deck. After hours and hours of pumping, Grant asks permission for the boats to be lowered so that the men might have a chance. Jack is also approached by a delegation headed by the Bosun, Mr. Lane. Jack agrees to provision the boats if the men will keep pumping to allow them to try another fothering sail. While provisioning the boats the men break into the spirit room and many become drunk and disorderly. Those loyal to Jack stay with the Leopard (8:250-4).

Injuries: Crushed fingers and "a number of wounds" (8:256).

Abandon Ship: Those named to have gone include Lieutenants Grant and Turnbull; Reverend Fisher; Benton, the Purser; and Lane, the Bosun (8:261). We also discover that Larkin, the Sailing Master, has left, though there is sentiment that he may have been helped over the side because he was considered a

"Jonah" by many of the men (9:268). Also, Stephen's servant, a Marine named Howard, which we find out about in the next book, "Fortune of War." (FOW 2:57)

Dead: Several dozen unnamed men. Jack allows Lt. Grant to take all but one boat and leave the sinking ship with men who wish to go. Men were killed or drowned in a dash for the boats. Those in the sea were beaten back by those in the boats (8:259-261).

Dead: The Turk, who was in a feeble state and would not eat pork, nor during daylight hours. There is some room for interpretation here. The passage reads, "...the Turk closed one knowing eye, and said, 'No Jonah now,' closed the other, and spoke no more" (9:267).

Illness: Scurvy, four cases, one being Faster Doudle, because they traded their lime-laced Grog for tobacco (9:271).

"There you are, Stephen,' cried Jack." He is hoping Stephen will play some music with him (9:273).

Rescued: Stephen Maturin, by Pollux, the Newfoundland, in a mishap with bladders intended to keep him afloat once they have arrived at Desolation Island (10:287).

Illness: Eating a sea elephant's liver made men break out in blue blotches. Cured by Stephen forcing the men to eat cabbages found on Desolation Island (10:289).

Dead: Surgeon of the American brig La Fayette, lost off South Georgia from "griping of the guts" (10:300).

Illness: Several seaman are suffering from scurvy aboard the La Fayette. Captain Winthrop Putnam is suffering an abscessed tooth (10:300).

Sick Bay Report & Exchange: Stephen travels to the La Fayette to attend to their maladies, an implicit trade for the use of their forge to fix the Leopard's rudder. He pulls Capt. Putnam's tooth, resections two legs to prevent their amputation, and performs a number of unnamed operations over a couple of days. He discovers quite a few "run" British sailors aboard, but does not betray them. Though Putnam hates the Royal Navy because of the Chesapeake incident where a cousin of his was killed, he "does the right thing" and allows the use of his forge and all that is necessary to ship a new rudder (10:309-310).

Fingered: Charles Pole, of the Foreign Office. Mrs. Wogan, convinced Stephen is "on the side of liberty" and knowing she is about to escape, tells Stephen he should contact Poe, in the American section. This tells Stephen Poe is an American agent (10:322).

"Jack did not intend to lose a minute." They shipped the Leopard's new rudder in the twilight rather than wait for morning (10:324).

Escaped: Mrs. Wogan and Michael Herapath "escape" to the La Fayette. Stephen has engineered the entire affair because he is attempting to poison French intelligence with false information. He pretended to find papers on the dead Mr. Martin implicating Martin as an intelligence agent, then enlisted Herapath in making copies. He knew full well that Herapath would tell Wogan, who would in turn give the information to her contacts. The scheme nearly goes awry because Herapath is quite conflicted because although he is an American citizen, he was rescued, promoted, and well-treated by Jack (10:325).

Notes:

- 1. We do not discover Peters is a midshipman on Leopard until the next novel, Fortune of War.
- 2. We know Mrs. Hoath is dead by inference. Jack says, "There are only three women on board." after the plague is over. (6:179)

Notes:

1. In HMS Surprise this man was named "Waring"

6: The Fortune of War

Dead: Captain Burrel, together with half his followers, of the flux. Burrel was to relieve Aubrey on the Leopard so he could take Acasta (1:16).

Dead: Crewmen in all boats but one that left the Leopard. Only Grant's boat made it to the Cape. The others are presumed lost at sea (1:23).

Dead: Cavaignac. Stephen learns from Wallis that Cavaignac has been shot as a result of Stephen's fake intelligence papers secreted to America with Louisa Wogan from Desolation Island (1:26).

Implicated: Stephen tells Wallis of his conversation with Louisa Wogan concerning Mr. Pole, an Englishman working in the British Foreign Office, who is apparently a spy for the Americans (1:27).

"'Why, Stephen,' cried he, 'there you are!..." Aubrey to Stephen, telling him of the Acasta and giving him his letters (1:28).

"...not to lose a moment of the monsoon.." Jack to Stephen, telling him of their imminent departure aboard La Flèche, much to Stephen's consternation, for he was hoping to "botanize" (1:28).

Warned: Despite Lieutenant Grant's story of loss, Sophia knew Jack and the Leopard were not lost because she received a letter from Diana, who had talked to Louisa Wogan after she had returned to America aboard the La Fayette whaler (2:41).

"I should not like to lose a moment of this monsoon." Captain Yorke of La Flèche. "There is not a moment to be lost." Jack to Stephen telling him to get his collections aboard La Flèche at once. "the cry of 'Lose not a minute' had echoed in his ears." Stephen ruminating over the fifty-three minutes he has to get his collections across (2:43).

"And Diana.....sat down without losing a moment and dashed off a letter to Sophie." Jack to Stephen, explaining what has happened (2:56).

Dead: En Jaume, killed by the French. Apparently a Catalan who has acted as an intermediary between the Catalan independence movement and the British. Now that he is dead Stephen considers himself the best person for the job (2:59).

"again and again Stephen had heard these words 'Lose not a minute" describing La Flèche's preparations to set to sea immediately (2:73).

Declaration of War: The United States of America declares war against Great Britain. The major complaints are the impressing of American-born seamen aboard British warships and restraint of trade (2:73).

Dead or Wounded: 125 in La Forte (44), and 5 in Sybille (38) in 1799, as recounted by Capt. Charles Yorke, a 3rd Lt. at the time (2:76).

Sick Bay Report: aboard La Flèche: "some interesting sunstrokes," and "the usual diseases" acquired by crew on liberty in Simon's Town (2:80).

Burned: The crew is awakened in the middle of the night because La Flèche is on fire. Capt. Yorke supervised the evacuation and was the last man off the ship. He sent the Leopards together into the blue cutter. As they lay off the ship the magazine blew up, and the ship sank. There was no initial loss of life. A squall that night separated the boats, and they never saw each other again. Ten Leopards were in the blue cutter, plus three Flitches they rescued from the water (2:82). Although not overtly stated, we are told that the surgeon, Mr. McLean, kept his pipe perpetually lit, in defiance of Lt. Warner's express orders (2:64) and that he is rather careless with it, propping it against a bottle of alcohol at one point (2:65). We are led to believe that it is at least possible that his pipe caused the fire.

Table 6-1: Survivors in the Blue Cutter

Note

Not all the members of the Blue Cutter are named. Page numbers are given when we discover they are (or were) in the Blue Cutter, sometimes well after they were rescued. We know that Aubrey was allowed to keep his "followers" when he left on La Flèche. These included his "mids" from Leopard. We know all their names from previous encounters. The "odd" names aboard the Blue Cutter must be the three Flitches Jack rescued from the water. Two are specifically named as such.

Action: The crew of the cutter lash together a sail made from their shirts, the real sail having been illegally traded away by the Bosun at the Cape. They nearly starve and are, of course, short of water. A ship sailing nearby fails to see them, even though they have come very close (2:82-91).

Dead: Raikes, quarter gunner, of exposure, hunger, and thirst, aboard La Flèche's blue cutter (3:90).

Rescued: The 12 remaining seaman aboard the cutter are badly burned from the tropical sun, dehydrated, hungry and thirsty. They are rescued by HMS Java (38) under Captain Lambert (3:91).

Action: Learned by Aubrey from Lambert. US Frigates have taken three Royal Navy ships in a row. USS Constitution (44) took HMS Guerrière (38), dismasted and burned her. USS Wasp (18) took HMS Frolic, and USS United States (44) took HMS Macedonian (38) off the Azores (3:97).

Dead: Kevin Fitzgerald, a cousin of Stephen's, who dies in the Austrian service. Stephen remarks that his death was much bemoaned by a woman of his acquaintance who otherwise advised people not to worry about the past (3:101-2).

Action: Java (38) meets Constitution (44). Constitution draws Java out to sea where there is plenty of room and no lee shore, then turns to fight. Java scores a hit on Constitution's wheel. Constitution scores no good hits, but wears. Rather than take the opportunity to rake her, Java follows, and now needs to switch from starboard to larboard guns. Lambert intends to cross Constitution's wake to rake her, but the gun crews have forgotten to load their starboard guns before moving to the larboard, therefore they are unprepared and Constitution escapes punishment. Side by side Constitution fires low. Java's bowsprit and headsails are gone. Constitution wore a third time. Java intended to tack, nearly missed stays. Constitution rakes her with a broadside, stern to stem. Java intends to board, but the foremast fell to cover the deck, creating havoc. Constitution went ahead, wore, and raked Java again, this time from stem to stern. Java's Mainmast is down, followed by gaff and spanker and mizenmast. Constitution moved off to repair damage. Java gets a temporary mast up. 6 foot of water in the well, rising fast. Constitution positions to rake Java, but waits. With her Captain down, Java's 1st lieutenant tells Jack to strike the colors and surrender (3:110+).

Wounded: Several men, including two midshipmen, when number three cannon dismounted (3:115).

Dead: One man, slid through the port (3:116).

Dead: Java Lt. Broughton, shot from the Constitution's top, then struck by a 24 pound ball and jerked against the rail (3:116).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey, a musket ball grazed his head (3:116).

Wounded: Mr. Byron, of a splinter wound to the chest and Bonden, by a flying splinter, a scalp wound (3:117).

Dead and Wounded: lay amidships by the score, including Bates, one of the Flitches (3:117).

Wounded: 1st Lt. Chads, in sick bay (3:118).

Wounded: a score of men from Constitution's rake (3:120).

Wounded: Captain Lambert is down (3:120).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey, by a marksman, his right arm. He got up and was knocked down by a splinter (3:120-1).

Wounded: a man lying on his own liver (3:121).

Dead: Forshaw, reported blown over the side (3:122).

Wounded: 100+ on Java (4:125).

Burned: Java. Rather than take her as a prize, the Americans set her afire (4:125).

Dead: Capt Lambert, "more of misery than of his wounds," said Stephen (4:126).

Wounded: Seven amputations, performed by Stephen (4:128).

Wounded: Commodore Bainbridge, on USS Constitution, a leg wound (4:129).

Dead: 2 quarter gunners from Java, buried at sea from Constitution (4:130).

Illness: Jack Aubrey, pneumonia, from staying topside in all weather in the vain hope of sighting British ships to take on Constitution (4:141).

Detained: Jack Aubrey and Stephen Maturin, effectively prisoners of war, waiting for an exchange (4:142).

Dead and wounded: Billy Peake, Captain of HMS Peacock (18), along with 37 of his men, in an encounter with USS Hornet (20), which had three men killed. Peacock was sunk in the 14 minute encounter. Hornet's Captain was Lawrence, who later commanded the USS Chesapeake (4:154).

Dead: one man on an American merchantman was allegedly killed when HMS Leander fired across her bow. This was a trumped up charge later proven false. Capt Harry Whitby was court-martialed in England, but acquitted (4:156).

Born: Caroline Herapath, to Louisa Wogan and Michael Herapath (5:159).

Dead: Pollux, Babbington's Newfoundland, eaten by inhabitants of the Friendly Islands, though they offered a maiden in return (5:160).

Reunited: Salubrity Boswell with her husband at Botany Bay (5:160).

Affair(s): Peggy Barnes is reported to have a dense pack of lovers (5:160).

Dead: Charles Pole, executed by hanging. Mrs. Wogan had told Stephen he should visit Mr. Pole in the foreign office, indicating he was an agent. Stephen informed Wallis in Java, and the agent was captured (5:162).

"Why, Stephen, there you are," Jack is in the hospital asleep. Stephen then introduces him to George Herapath, Michael's father (5:175).

Accused: Jack Aubrey, as a spy. Louisa Wogan has the idea that the false papers she unwittingly carried to America were the creation of Jack Aubrey, who had enlisted young Herapath in copying them. There is no notion of how she got this mistaken idea unless, perhaps, Herapath lied to her. In any event, this is the reason why Jack has been detained rather than exchanged (5:178).

Injured: Lt. Mowett, three ribs broken as the result of a splinter in the Peacock action, as related by Capt Lawrence to Aubrey (6:201).

Affair: Louisa Wogan is involved with Mr. Johnson, who has become estranged from Diana Villiers (6:204).

"There you are, Stephen." Jack is in the hospital. Stephen is about to find how Johnson knows so much about him (7:217).

Smoked: Stephen Maturin. Johnson pays an "innocent" visit to Jack Aubrey in the hospital where Jack talks up Stephen's linguistic abilities. Johnson asks Jack to help translate a French document, feigning little knowledge of the language himself, and quickly discovers that Jack and his quite elementary and stumbling knowledge of French could not possibly be responsible for the false papers. Indeed, it is Stephen, whom Johnson has been attempting to recruit into American intelligence (7:218).

Action: French attack Maturin. There are two attempts to capture Stephen. The first is when Pontet-Canet attempts to get Stephen into a coach under the pretense to help a lady in medical distress. Stephen falls to the ground screaming for help. Two British officers, Keyne and Abel, come to his rescue and the French run off (7:229). Stephen pays a visit to Johnson to protest, and Johnson assures him of protection if only Stephen will sign on as a minor advisor. Johnson gives him a couple of days to think about it and leaves town (with Louisa Wogan). As Stephen attempts to contact Mr. Andrews, the King's Agent as far as prisoner relations is concerned, he finds the French waiting for him. This time the chase is long and arduous. Stephen evades his captors, hides in a pig sty, steals the French coach, and ultimately climbs a rope to the second floor of Diana's hotel, where he hides in her bed as the captors lose track of him (7:239-242).

Wounded: by accident, a child on the streets of Boston, by French agents pursuing Stephen, who are then attacked by the irate father (7:239).

Injured: Stephen Maturin, 8th and 9th ribs cracked, and a concussion, from the second attack by French agents in Boston (7:241).

Proposal: Stephen suggests Diana's only way out is to marry him, thus becoming a British citizen again automatically. She accepts the offer in a note to Stephen, but it is never delivered. Stephen finds it in Johnson's study, therefore, as soon as Johnson returns, Diana will likely be arrested (7:247).

Dead: Jean-Paul Pontet-Canet, French agent, his carotid artery slit by Stephen in Johnson's study (7:248).

Dead: Jean Dubreuil, French agent, was shot by Stephen in the chest moments after Pontet-Canet was killed (7:249).

Recovered: Stephen manages to purloin Johnson's private papers which detail American intelligence operations, as well as Diana's diamonds, which Johnson had taken from her (7:249).

Dead: Carrington and Vargas, two agents tortured and killed by Dubreuil, remembered by Stephen (7:249).

"Lose not a minute,' he said." Jack is sailing a fisherman's scow toward HMS Shannon, hoping the Americans are not already after him (8:274).

Acquitted: At a mandatory Court Martial, Lt. Chads and the officers of HMS Java, for losing their ship to the Americans (8:279).

Injured: Three Irishmen aboard HMS Shannon (38), from fighting each other (9:298).

Dead: One rat, shot dead by Stephen with a pistol as it advanced on Diana's bowl of soup (9:319).

Action: USS Chesapeake (38) takes on HMS Shannon (38). Chesapeake, under Capt. Lawrence, accepts Captain Broke's challenge to fight one on one (though he sets sail prior to receiving Broke's latest message). Declining an opportunity to rake Shannon, Chesapeake ranges alongside. They exchange broadsides. It is a short fight, about 15 minutes. Shannon boards Chesapeake. They win basically because of superior gunnery (9:323-329).

Dead: Second Captain of Shannon's aftermost carronade, a bar shot had opened his belly (9:324).

Dead: Helmsman aboard Chesapeake, as a shot destroys the wheel (9:324).

Dead: Shannon's clerk, Mr. Dunn, and his purser, Mr. Aldham, and several others (9:325).

Wounded: The Bosun's arm is chopped off aboard Shannon (9:326).

Wounded: 1st Lt. Watt, in the foot, shot from Chesapeake's mizzentop (9:326).

Wounded: Craddock, in the leg and forearm (9:327).

Wounded: Capt Broke, while on board Chesapeake, a head injury inflicted by prisoners who overpowered him, and clubbed him with a musket. Broke wounded one of his attackers before falling (9:328).

Wounded: Seaman about to kill Broke. Aubrey severed his cutlass arm, which fell into the sea and threw his body into the waist of the ship (9:328).

Dead: 1st Lt. Watt, and several of his men, by friendly fire as he attempted to strike the colors of Chesapeake (9:328).

Dead and Wounded: 24 on Shannon killed, including 1st Lt. Watt. 59 wounded, including Capt Broke, altogether a quarter of the complement. 60 dead aboard Chesapeake, including Capt. Lawrence, with 90 wounded (SM: 1:9-11).

Table 6-5: Met or mentioned aboard HMS Shannon

7: The Surgeon's Mate

Wounded: Stephen performs an amputation subsequent to the Shannon vs. Chesapeake action (1:14).

Prisoner: Several British deserters are discovered aboard Chesapeake and sent to prison to await trial (1:16).

Promoted: Andrew Wray, to Acting 2nd Secretary of the Admiralty (1:27).

Invited: Stephen Maturin, to address the Institut de France on the extinct avifauna of Rodriguez Island (1:35).

Wounded: John Bullock, forecastleman on Surprise, wounded in the leg in an encounter with a French 74. Stephen saved his leg, but in a subsequent action when on HMS Benbow, Bullock was again wounded and his leg was amputated. He is now a footman in Nova Scotia—a footman with one foot (1:39).

Pregnant: Stephen suspects Diana of being pregnant and consults the American surgeon of Chesapeake (2:42).

"Why, there you are,' said Jack." At the victory ball, introducing Stephen to his cousin, Colonel Tom Aldington, of the First Foot Guards (2:45).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey, an accounting of some scars: Cutlass slash from one right ear across the cheek-bone. Scar from a splinter, across line of the jaw to the other ear (2:49).

Seduced: Jack Aubrey, by Amanda Smith, "like taking pennies from a blind man's hat," says Diana (2:57).

Court Martial: Lt. Chads and the other surviving officers of HMS Java are acquitted for losing her to USS Constitution. (2:62)

Illness: Stephen doses Jack to reduce the chances of his encounters with Amanda Smith (2:65).

Injured: Amanda Smith, when her dog cart upsets on a turn. Hysterical, but no lasting injuries (2:68).

Pregnant: Diana, confirmed, by Johnson (2:69).

Action: The Diligence, carrying Jack, Stephen, and Diana as passengers, is chased by two American ships, including the Liberty. They were likely sent by Johnson in an attempt to recover Diana and her diamonds. As the Liberty closes in on Diligence, she hits an iceberg. She sheered off her stem below the waterline and was de-masted. Her men were rescued by her sister ship just before Liberty sunk. No report of casualties (3:93).

At the Crown asking for a horse. "...'He is to say it is for Captain Aubrey, and if he is here before I have finished my beer he shall have half a crown. There is not a moment to lose." (4:99).

Abandoned: Killick, by the wife he purchased, who ran off with her real husband shortly after Killick sailed (4:113).

Pregnant: Amanda Smith, claiming so in a letter to Jack, where she also claims to be flying to meet him and, oh, she also needs £500 (5:148).

Dead: Ponsich, Catalan man of letters, fellow naturalist and agent, along with all hands aboard Daphne, when it wandered too close to the shore batteries at Grimsholm in the Baltic. Many bodies washed ashore (5:158, 163-4).

"Why, there you are, Stephen,' he cried." Jack is reading several of Amanda Smith's letters in the privacy of a building attached to his lead mine near Ashgrove Cottage (6:162).

Action: An account of the Martello Tower action in Corsica in 1793 or 1794. HMS Juno and HMS Fortitude battered the tower while 1400 soldiers landed. The tower had an ensign and 32 men and managed to hold off this force. Fortitude had 62 men killed and wounded and a great deal of damage to the ship: Three guns dismounted, mainmast shot through and other masts wounded, and also set on fire by hot shot (6:164).

Pregnant: Stephen says the evidence suggests Amanda Smith is lying about her pregnancy (6:167).

Prize Money Lost: Grant, the Lieutenant in Leopard, claims the ship they sank was only a store ship. Jack must get affidavits from all other officers to attest otherwise. Until he can get these he gets no prize money for sinking Waakzaamheid (6:180).

"Ay, so they do. Well, come now: we must not lose a minute. The First Lord wishes to see you." Admiral Dommet to Jack Aubrey (6:181).

Posted: Jack Aubrey, to Ariel (16), 32 pound carronades plus two long nines. A complement of 112, but they are twenty short (6:180).

Injured: Jagiello, hits his head on a low beam aboard Ariel (6:189).

Injured: Jagiello, again, a wounded hand, almost severed a finger. He also fell into the sea, and into the hold (7:195).

Dead: In Gothenburg, three suicides floated past Ariel (7:201).

Rescued: Stephen fell when attempting to board the flagship. Jack had anticipated this and had given orders for the Ariel's gig to not leave any gaps, plus he had two strong seamen stand below Stephen just in case he fell (7:212).

Dead: 2000 French and Spaniards at the Battle of the Gut, led by Admiral Sir James Saumarez and recounted to Jack, et al (7:213).

"And this is a situation in which I believe we must not lose a minute.' Ever since he had taken to the sea he had been harassed by the cry "Lose not a minute' and it gave him a certain amount of pleasure to use it himself at last. 'Lose not a minute,' he repeated, savoring the words." Stephen to Admiral Saumarez (7:218).

Action: The Ariel chases the Minnie intending to use her in a ruse to get into Grimsholm. Ultimately the Minnie goes aground. Ariel anchors in deeper water just beyond her capture when a boat attempts to escape to shore. After repeatedly telling the boat to stop, Ariel fires her guns and destroys the boat (8:239).

"We must heave her off at once; there is not a minute to be lost." Jack to Mr. Grimmond on the necessity to re-float the Minnie before the tide runs out (8:240).

Dead and Wounded: A boatload of French officers attempting to escape from the Minnie, shot by Ariel's broadside. One survivor, wounded in the leg and head (8:239). He later dies of his wounds (8:257). We later learn the French General Mercier was aboard the Minnie and apparently lost in the boat (9:264).

Dead: Minnie's Master, who had been pistoled by the French, apparently as a result of his running aground and allowing Minnie to be captured by Ariel (8:242).

Persuaded: The 1st Mate of Minnie, by Jagiello, into relating a few pertinent facts about the Minnie's voyage, plus telling them of the proper signal flag to use when approaching Grisholm (8:245).

Rescued: Stephen attempts to disembark the Minnie's gig and falls between the boat and the jetty. Stephen calls for help in Catalan, and is pulled out by two corporals (8:258).

Taken: Grisholm, without a shot. Stephen meets his own godfather, Col. En Ramon d'Ullastret Casademon on the island and persuades him that supporting Napoleon is not in his best interests. The Spanish garrison agrees to be transported back to Spain and the British take over the island, and her batteries (8:258-60).

"Sir, You are hereby required and directed to proceed without a moment's loss of time, in His Majesty's ship under your command....to Hano Bay," Admiral Sumarez's orders to Jack to take on a convoy (9:266).

"you must signify to the lady that she is to be over the side in two minutes, There is not a moment to be lost." Jack to Jagiello ordering him to get "The Gentlemen's Relish" off the ship (9:271).

"There you are, Stephen,' he cried." Jack has eaten all the bacon for breakfast, leaving Stephen nothing, which Stephen calls "the same old squalid tale" (9:282).

"Jack was determined not to lose a minute of it" (breeze). And later..."but to convey the Catalan troops to Santandero without a moment's loss of time" (9:287).

Action: Arial suffers a foretopmast cut away in a brief action against the Méduse, a French 74. HMS Ajax takes on the chase as Ariel continues on. Ariel then quickly finds herself in a small bay with breakers all around (9:301).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey, knocked down on deck by an errant throw of a leadline. Although in itself not a grave injury, Jack is incapacitated for a few seconds, allowing his 1st Lt. Hyde to mismanage the ship so that it crashes into Thatcher Rock in Gripes Bay. Ariel's back is broken amidships. Jack manages to get her to the jetty at Brest, where he surrenders (9:310).

Prisoner: Jack and the crew are taken prisoner at Brest. We lose track of the crew as Jack, Stephen, and Jagiello are transported to Paris because their answers were insufficient (10:312+).

Escaped: "Ludwig Himmelfahrt," marine, his clothes found in the privy. Actually Colonel Casademon, Stephen's godfather (10:313).

Illness: Jack, from eating crayfish, along with Jagiello and Duhamel, their French escort. (10:321) Jack apparently develops dysentery (10:331).

Dead: Commander Wright, murdered by the French while in custody in 1805, as related by Jack (10:324).

Dead: Duc d'Enghien, shot on false documents (10:325).

Imprisoned: In Temple Prison, Paris: Jack, Stephen, and Jagiello (10:325).

Pregnant: A mouse at Temple Prison, Paris (10:325). She later produces a brood (10:342).

"Things are growing very urgent indeed, and there is not a moment to lose." Jack to Jagiello asking him to have their cook smuggle in a cold chisel and some rope for their escape attempt (10:343).

Dead: A double agent who had worked for Arliss, by firing squad, witnessed by Stephen (11:354).

Dead: Captain and 147 seaman aboard Méduse when HMS Ajax took her off the Hague. Jack finds this out in a Naval Chronicle smuggled to him (11:361).

Married: Amanda Smith to Captain Alexander Lushington of the Royal Marines, in Nova Scotia. In the same Naval Chronicle, much to Jack's relief (11:362).

"There you are, Stephen,' cried Jack." Stephen has just returned from an interrogation where Johnson identified him.

Injured: Stephen bangs his shin as he falls in Temple Prison (11:376).

Lost: Diana's Blue Peter diamond, which she offers to help release Stephen from prison. Madame Gros winds up wearing it, and her husband pleads for Stephen's release. Unfortunately, this action results in more suspicion heaped on Stephen. He is questioned by a rival intelligence unit, and his fate is sealed when Johnson arrives to identify him (11:359).

Escaped: Jack, Stephen, and Jagiello escape the prison with the help of Duhamel. Stephen is to carry peace proposals back to England (11:374).

Miscarriage: Diana, while still in Paris (11:375).

"Then there is not a moment to lose. I have a service to beg." Stephen to Captain Babbington asking him to marry Stephen and Diana Villiers (11:381).

Married: Stephen and Diana, by Captain Babbington while aboard HMS Oedipus escaping from France (11:382).

Table 7-4: Met or mentioned elsewhere in The Surgeon's Mate

Notes:

- 1. This doesn't make sense. There is a "Durand-Ruel" mentioned in the previous book, Fortune of War (1:24), as a French agent, but the context here seems to indicate Jean Dubreuil, whom Stephen shot dead in Boston.
- 2. This is the same name of the priest in Boston who was to marry Stephen and Diana.
- 3. The phrase is "came to an anguished halt in mid-career." (5:157) This could mean his speech ended his career, or, if we take amore liberal interpretation of "mid-career," his speech ended in the middle and he did not finish.
- 4. Yet it was a Royal Navy officer named "Humphreys" who sailed in the Diligence with just such a dispatch.

8: The Ionian Mission:

Posted: Jack Aubrey to Worcester (74) 1842 tons, 32 lbers, complement of 640 (1:12).

Affair: Andrew Wray and Harriet Fanshaw (1:17)

Pregnant: Suspected. Diana Villiers (1:22) But we later learn she is not (5:148).

Injured: Jagiello, his arm was hurt when the carriage lost a wheel attempting to get Stephen to the Worcester in time to sail (1:31).

Wounded: James Macdonald, cousin of Capt. Harris, had his arm taken off at the forearm by Stephen Maturin. Also Mr. Gill, repaired by Stephen when Gill was a Master's Mate aboard the Hannibal, though we do not learn the nature of the wound (1:34). He was one of 142 casualties on Hannibal at the Bay of Algeciras.

Rejected: Mr. Yeats, a gardener, whose business will be ruined if he is pressed. Stephen overhears and rejects him on the grounds of a hernia (2:41).

Rejected: As Midshipmen. Lord Alton's son, for being too young, and Mr. Jameson's son, for being too old (2:41-42).

Rated: Captain's servant, Henry Meadows, 8 years old, Captain Fanshawe's sister's grandchild, by Jack, on the books, but not aboard (2:43).

"There is not a moment to lose: the hound may report aboard any day, and then it will be much harder to get rid of him..." Jack to Mr. Simpson, trying to avoid the arrival of Lieutenant Somers, known to be a bad seaman (2:43).

"There you are, Stephen,' said Jack. 'Killick, Killick, there. The toasted cheese, 'd'ye hear me?" Stephen has reported aboard the Worcester, on time (2:44).

Dead: A fireworks maker, recently deceased. Jack buys all his powder from his widow (2:45).

"...There is a mortal deal of work to be done, if ever we are to put to sea. There is not a moment to lose." Tom Pullings to two new lieutenants reporting aboard (2:50).

Dead: Capt. Edward Calamy, once a shipmate of Aubrey's, along with all hands aboard the Rochester (74), in a storm in 1808. His son becomes a midshipman aboard Worcester (2:51).

Lost: 13 ships, not counting those captured, in one year (2:52).

"'There is not a moment to be lost,' said Jack, reaching for his bow. 'Let the battle begin." (2:55).

Action: Worcester (74) takes on Jemmapes. They trade a couple of broadsides apiece before Jemmapes makes a run for L'Orient, mistaking the colored fireworks powder used by Worcester for a strange weapon (2:65).

Wounded: Three splinter wounds, one crushed foot (2:69). Also, Stephen Maturin is hit by a falling shoulder block, then a hunk of elm ripped off a hand's breadth of his scalp, then a splinter impaled both his feet (3:70).

"he did not intend to lose a minute, even if begged to do so by a choir of virgins on their knees." Jack's thoughts as they drop Dr. Graham off at Mahon (3:86).

Wounded: Nathaniel Martin, bitten by a mother owl resulting in blindness in one eye, an explanation given to Stephen. (3:87)

Wounded: Jack Aubrey, bitten in the leg by Tabitha, Admiral Thornton's pug dog (3:95). Also bitten were Admirals Harte and Mitchell, and the Captain of the Fleet.

Dead: A Maltese clerk accused of comforting the King's enemies. At first it is deemed a suicide (4:105), but given that he was in irons at the time awaiting a court martial, it would have been difficult for him to accomplish. Because his testimony in public could damage British Intelligence, it is suggested that he was probably murdered by the Admiral's secretary, Mr. Allen, to keep him silent. Stephen later gets blamed for this death (4:109).

Dead: Mr. Waterhouse, British agent, shot by the French (4:110).

Dead: Two seamen, executed, hung from the foreyardarm of Defender (4:116).

Flogged: Around the fleet: Seven men, by order of Courts Martial (4:116).

Injured: Jack Aubrey, his hand is horribly swollen because he used it to slow down sliding down a backstay, allowing Admiral Mitchell to win a skylarking contest (4:122).

Dead: Captain of the Blanch when she took the Pique. Admiral Mitchell was a Lieutenant at the time, and this gave him his promotion to Commander (4:126).

Sick Bay Report: 2 ruptures, 2 gleets, and a fractured clavicle (5:137).

Saved: Hundreds, if not thousands of quail who landed on Worcester after a storm, by efforts of Maturin and Martin. Maturin let it be known that the quails, flying from Africa to Europe, had eaten poisonous berries en route and Martin gave a sermon which told a Biblical story of many deaths after eating quail (5:138).

Affair: Miss Serracapriola and Harry Bennet, Captain of Berwick. (5:139)

Fired: Lt. Somers, who, while drunk, missed stays to make the Worcester look bad in front of the entire fleet. When checked by Jack he made to attack the Captain with a piece of wood, restrained by Mowett before he could do so. Somers exchanged with Lt. Rowan of Colossus (5:142-3).

Returned: HMS Surprise, to the fleet, much to the delight of Jack, Stephen, and Pullings, among others (5:145).

Affair: Stephen receives the first of several letters from someone unknown who claims Diana is having an affair with Captain Jagiello. Stephen does not believe it. Indeed, the story is false (5:148). The real question is: Who is writing the letters?

Engaged: A forced engagement between Fanny Harte, Admiral Harte's daughter, and Andrew Wray, of the Admiralty, much to the chagrin of William Babbington (5:151).

Illness: Jack Aubrey contracts a bad cold (6:157).

Wounded: Lt. Patterson, of Polyphemus. He had lost an arm early in the war (6:165).

"These thoughts....were now dispelled by the sight of her captain (Babbington from Dryad) coming aboard the Worcester as though there were not a moment to be lost" (6:173).

Action: or lack thereof. Jack is ordered by Admiral Harte to take a message to Medina, a neutral port, along with the Polyphemus and Babbington's Dryad. Babbington finds two French ships in harbor and turns around before they can capture him, reporting back to Jack's squadron. Jack decides to take his three ships to Medina to fight them if he can, though he is bound by neutrality laws that forbid him from firing first. He attempts to provoke the French, sailing right by them with gun ports open, but the French are similarly constrained and no battle takes place. The two captains remove their hats to one another, but no one fires (6:184-188).

Court Martial: Jack and Babbington are threatened with a Court Martial for their failed mission to Medina. The idea was to sacrifice the Dryad and thus draw in the British fleet. Harte said he made this clear, but fortunately Jack had Harte write the orders down, where they clearly emphasize the "strict neutrality" phrase and make no mention of a sacrifice of the Dryad. Admiral Thornton concedes the point, and Harte is made to look foolish (7:190-2).

"Harte said they (Jack's orders) were written in a great hurry, there not being a moment to lose; that he had not had time to read them over, and the clerk might have mistaken his drift..." as Admiral Thornton dons spectacles to discover exactly what Admiral Harte had written (7:192).

Married: Mercedes, very likely (though not clearly) one of Jack's old lovers, to the owner of the Crown (7:201).

Affair: Quashed. Jack is about to spend some quality time with Mercedes when Stephen arrives to whisk Jack off to a rendezvous (7:202).

"Come, brother, drink up your coffee. There is not a moment to lose. We must run to the boat." Stephen to Jack. See above (7:203). A little while later Stephen says, "For God's love, Jack, just point the ship in as near the right direction as every you can, and tell me about leeway afterwards. There is not a moment to be lost." (repeated) (7:205).

Sick Bay Report: Williams suffers a camel bite and there are some broken bones and teeth knocked out due to fighting. Some hands are upset Jack did not fight the French at Medina, and he is defended by his followers (7:207).

Wounded: Ebenezer Graham, a rival agent to Stephen, shot himself in the foot (7:222) and blasted off a toe (7:226), in a rendezvous gone bad on the French coast.

Illness: Mumps: Mr. Williamson and several others (8:228) including Mr. Calamy (9:280).

Escaped: 17 French ships of the line from the British blockade (8:237).

Dead: The barber for Surprise, sentenced to death for bestiality (8:243).

Sick Bay Report: Sprains, contusions, broken bones, and one complex compound fracture, from a storm (8:251).

Dead: Captain Latham and the 1st Lt. of Surprise, by a single ball from Robuste, during an unsuccessful attempt to engage the French fleet (9:257).

Illness: Admiral Thornton is dying slowly. We don't know exactly from what (9:258).

Posted: To HMS Surprise, Jack Aubrey. He fills the ship with many from the Worcester, which is so badly beaten that she must go to the yard at once. Surprise is 450 Tons, Complement of 197 (9:258).

Dead: Pasha of Scutari, killed by Ali Arslan of Iannina, thus changing the political situation (9:261).

Dispersed: The old crew of the Surprise, in small groups. From remarks by Admiral Harte it is obvious that the crew was close to mutiny. Dispersal in small groups was the same technique Aubrey suggested with the crew of the Polychrest (9:263).

Won: A poetry contest. Lt. Mowett, for poetry in the modern style and Lt. Rowan, for poetry in the classical manner. Driver would have won for elegant delivery, but his poetry was not original, a misunderstanding (9:274).

Rescued: Stephen Maturin, who dove off the Surprise for a swim just as she was about to chase a prize. If it had not been for John Newby seeing him, he would have been lost (9:278).

Prize: The Bonhomme Richard, with a great deal of silver and dollars, most distributed directly to the crew of Surprise. The gunner made a lucky hit on the topsail halyards from 1000 yards. Rowan becomes prizemaster and takes the prize into Mahon (9:280-1).

"There you are, Doctor,' said Jack, shaking his hand. 'I thought you might like to see our prize before I send her away." The Doctor had been blamed for the loss earlier and is now rehabilitated in the eyes of the crew (9:280).

Dead: Most of the French crew of the Bonhomme Richard, a blockade runner which had been taken by Greek pirates (9:281).

"I always told him as a boy to waste not a minute, ha, ha, ha..." Jack to Pullings about Babbington, whose ship, Dryad, has just missed out on sharing the prize money (9:283).

"...then you will not lose a moment of this beautiful leading breeze..." and also "...proceed to Malta without the loss of a minute..." Jack to Mr. Rowan, giving directions for him to sail the prize back to port in Malta (9:284-5).

Saved: 38 women, by Babbington, from a Corsair that had kept the women prisoner (9:286).

Wounded: Babbington's Bosun, his hand bitten to the bone by a woman from Lesbos (9:286).

Dead: 20 to 30 corpses from a Greek felucca, caught by the Turkish frigate Torgud belonging to Mustapha Bey. Though it is not explicit, this is likely the same felucca that took the Bonhomme Richard and escaped when Surprise came along (9:287).

Sunk: The cirque used by Ismail Bey, ruler of Mesenteron, to visit the Surprise. He presents an ineffective and largely theoretical plan to oust the French from Marga in exchange for a great many cannon offered by the British. Jack does not trust him (10:295).

"Come, Killick, pipe down and give me my coat,' said Jack. 'There is not a moment to be lost." Jack dressing up in preparation for the punishment ceremony (10:300).

Flogging: Davis, for insubordination, averted by Midshipman Elphinstone, who stood up for him, this after Jack talked to him about the disadvantages of flogging (10:301).

Dead: A Lieutenant, lost overboard from the Hebe. Jack had proposed Tom Pullings as a replacement, but Captain Rowlands did not approve of Pullings' country accent (10:303).

Taken: The two transports full of cannon bound for Sciahan Bey, ruler of Kutali, who Jack had chosen to receive them, by Mustapha Bey, ruler of Karia (11:345).

Action: Surprise versus Torgud (32) and Kitabi (20). Surprise intercepts Mustapha's ships to get the transports and the cannon back. The somewhat lengthy battle shows the Turks firing steadily and inflicting much damage on the Surprise, especially with its large 38 pound cannon amidships. Surprise outmaneuvers both ships and avoids being boarded by the much more numerous crew of Torgud. During the battle a large explosion aboard Kitabi renders that ship ineffective and it manages to ram Torgud amidships. Surprise boards Torgud from Kitabi, which has surrendered, thus mirroring Lord Nelson's actions against the Spanish. The Torgud is taken, but quickly sinks (11:358+).

Dead and Wounded: Three Surprises, maimed by a forward gun that lost its mounting (11:358), a seaman lost a finger, but did not notice it (11:360), six badly wounded, three dead (11:361). Williamson's arm taken off at the elbow (11:362). We are not told how many dead are on the Turkish ships, but the Torgud was seen to throw bodies off the deck twice during the encounter.

Wounded: Jack Aubrey. He suffers a pistol ball across his ribs, a sword thrust on his other side, and damage to his forehead from Davis' cleaver, which caught him on the backswing (11:366).

Wounded: Tom Pullings. His forehead is badly wounded, and part of his nose is chopped off, sewn back on by Stephen. We don't find out about this until the next book, Treason's Harbor (1:9).

Table 8-2: Crew of HMS Worcester

1. There is some confusion as to the number of parsons to board. Jack says seven (2:51), but then says there are six, plus Dr. Graham, a moral philosopher (2:53). In fact, seven parsons plus Mr. Graham are named in the course of the voyage.

Table 8-3: Met or mentioned elsewhere in The Ionian Mission

- 1. Writing Meadows illegally onto the ship's books is repaid later when Captain Fanshaw gives Jack "half the Skates" who are experienced able seamen, as well as the masts he has requested, a clear reward for Jack's acquiescence.
- 2. Not of the Army, the Foreign Office, or the Navy, but a separate organization which often interferes with Naval Intelligence projects.
- 3. Admiral Thornton gives away his plan to provoke the French into a breech of neutrality here, which Jack avoids later on, earning the anger of the Admiral.
- 4. There is some question as to whether Jaffar is alive or dead. Mohammed claims the previous Pasha, his brother, is dead, but Admiral Thornton states he is in Algiers. (4:114)
- 5. See the previous note. The names and relationship of those contending for the rulership of Barka seem to have changed from Chapter Four. (7:189)
- 6. There is some confusion here in that Captain Fanshaw sometimes spells his name "Fanshawe" and sometimes is listed as an admiral.

Table 8-4: Crew of HMS Surprise (2nd commission) and Niobe

- 1. Aubrey filled the crew of Surprise with 200 men from the 600 of Worcester. We are told that many of them chose to come across. The ones listed here are specifically mentioned in the text.
- 2. The list is for the Second Commission of HMS Surprise which spans from The Ionian Mission clear through to Reverse of the Medal, therefore it includes crew members mentioned in Treason's Harbour, The Far Side of the World, and Return of the Medal as well as Surprise crew members who sailed in the temporary command in Niobe.
- 3. Rev. Mr. Martin was in and out of the Surprise during this commission, having taken an official stint as parson aboard Berwick.
- 4. There is mention of "the younger Boyle" (FS 4:121), who must be the midshipman here. (He is eating with the Captain.) But that implies an "older" Boyle, whom we never meet.

- 5. There is a yeoman of Signals also named Wilkins, but given the two professions, it is unlikely to be the same one.
 6. TH:10:319 lists a "Williams" who is obviously a Midshipman. This is very likely meant to
- be Williamson.
- 7. William Mowett is sometimes called "James" Mowett, as in RM 2:57

9: Treason's Harbour

Promoted: Tom Pullings, to Commander, for the successful action against the Torgud. There is some question as to the propriety here because the Torgud was a rebel ship rather than one belonging to a foreign Navy (1:9).

Dismissed the Service: Ex Captain, now Mr. Holden, for using his ship to protect some Greeks from a Turkish raid, since Turkey is a nominal British ally (1:13).

Awarded: The chelengk medal to Jack Aubrey from the Sultan of Turkey (1:13).

Dead: A Gendarme, killed by Lt. Charles Fielding as he attempted to flee Verdun (1:17).

Accused: Falsely by the French agent Lesueur, Stephen Maturin, for being responsible for the poisoning death of a Maltese clerk aboard Ocean, just prior to his Court Martial. In fact, it was Mr. Allen, the Admiral's secretary, who likely murdered the clerk to keep him silent (1:17).

Jailed: Lt. Charles Fielding, at Bitchie (1:17).

Lost: Marga, to the French, who were driven out by Jack Aubrey, who placed cannon high above the town and threatened to bombard it (1:18).

Dead: Admiral Thornton, of illness (1:20).

Dead: One ass, killed by Ponto, Mrs. Fielding's Illyrian mastiff (1:24).

"he said there was no time to be lost—they might do as they chose—but if that fiddle were not at Mrs Fielding's within five minutes of his own arrival, they might look out for another ship." Jack to Bonden and Killick (1:35).

Saved: Ponto, Mrs. Fielding's mastiff, by Jack Aubrey, after Ponto fell into a well. Ponto's resulting love of Jack causes quite a bit of damage, including to Jack's reputation because the dog's fondness is misinterpreted as proving an affair between Jack and Mrs. Fielding (2:37-8).

"I am expected at the dockyard, and to tell you the truth I have not a minute to lose." Jack to Mrs. Fielding after her dog, Ponto, broke a number of glass pieces upon greeting Jack (2:40).

Circumcised: Three English merchants, by Tallal ibn Yahaya, ruler of Mubara, in retaliation for the forced Baptism of three of his ancestors (2:46).

Wounded: Thwaites, a ship's boy. His legs are bitten off by a Red Sea shark, as related by Capt. Hanmer (2:49).

Saved: Captain Hartley, from drowning by Jack Aubrey, when his gig overturned off St. Kitts years ago, a reminisce (2:51).

Rescued: Stephen Maturin. At least, he must have been. He shows up at Searle's sopping wet, but does not give an explanation (3:66).

"There you are, Stephen. There you are at last. How did your diving go?" Stephen has been experimenting with Halley's diving bell (3:80).

Affair: Refused by Stephen Maturin of Laura Fielding, who is being used by the French in an attempt to compromise Stephen. He does set up the appearance of an affair in order to pass false information to the French, but he is widely seen as having engaged in the affair (3:89-93).

Sick Bay Report: On Marta, 11 in the hospital: Four with Maltese fever, four with the Great Pox, two with broken limbs, and one pierced by a Maltese knife (4:101).

"One thing was certain: there was not a minute to be lost." (4:107)

"Thank you, sir,' said Jack, 'but I believe I shall leave my farewells for my return and pull across directly: there is not a moment to lose." Jack to Admiral Sir Francis Ives upon setting out for the Red Sea. The Admiral is alluding to Jack's supposed (and untrue) affair with Mrs. Fielding (4:110).

Injured: Stephen Maturin, pitched out of his chair on the Dromedary while asleep and hit his forehead. Stitched up by Mr. Martin (4:118).

Illness: 2 cases of syphilis (4:125).

Illness: Polwhele, a tooth pulled aboard Dromedary (4:126).

Wounded: Mr. Allen, a bullet in his shoulder, recounted as received, but not felt, in an encounter with a privateer (4:129).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey, by a musket ball at the same time as a pike thrust when he was a Master's Mate. The bullet was extracted by Stephen many years later (4:129).

Dead and Wounded: Lt. Rowan recounts many dead and wounded aboard the Thetis in a poem read in the gunroom (4:131).

Posted: Jack Aubrey and the entire crew of Surprise, temporarily, to Niobe, on loan from the East India Company and waiting for them in the Red Sea. They are transported on the Dromedary (5:134).

"But the fact of the matter is, there is not a moment to lose, if you understand me." Jack to Stephen, who is bemoaning that the possibility of intercepting a massive treasure is more important than birds (5:138).

"...and by that time therefore the tents should be struck, lanterns provided, beasts watered and all hands fed, so that we may get under way without the loss of a minute." Jack to Mr. Hairabedian, so he can translate to Abbas, who greeted them on shore (5:150).

"But when Jack very earnestly represented to him that there was not a minute to be lost....he smiled and said 'You young men are always impatient to be doing..." Murad Bey's reaction to Jack wanting to leave immediately (5:156).

Wounded: Reverend Mr. Martin, bitten by a camel (5:159).

Illness: Preserved Killick, severe heatstroke (6:167-8).

Injured: Mr. Hairabedian, the Dragoman, by a scorpion, hiding in his shoe (6:168).

Lost: Jack's chelengk, after a camel fight on top of Jack's tent (6:168).

"And yet we did not lose a minute, coming across the isthmus" Jack to himself as he is about to fall asleep (6:173).

"she may be warped out beyond the harbour mouth, not to lose a minute of the Egyptian, if ever it comes on to blow." Jack to Mr. McElwee, the red sea pilot furnished by the East India Company, on making the Niobe ready for sea. The "Egyptian" is a wind which often blows down the Red Sea (6:175).

Injured: The Helmsman, a broken arm when the wheel spokes suddenly spin during a squall (7:177).

Sick Bay Report: strains, bruises, bones, typical after a storm at sea (6:185).

Dead: Mr. Hairabedian, eaten by sharks shortly after jumping into the Red Sea for a swim (6:187).

Found: The chelengk, in a false-bottom box among the effects of Mr. Hairabedian. He had managed to steal it during the camel scuffle (6:189).

Beaten: Two Turks in a most appalling manner by their leader (6:190).

Action: Niobe, the borrowed East India sloop crewed by members of Surprise, chases a galley in the Red Sea thought to contain a great treasure of French payoff money. Jack sees that the galley is towing a drag sail to fool him and so sinks it with one shot. Had he chased any further the galley would have led him into a narrow bay recently re-enforced by the French with new batteries. The crew uses Stephen's diving bell to recover the treasure, only to find it is only lead. The entire caper turns out to have been a set-up and a trap (6:198-209).

Lost: 5,000 purses, the anticipated treasure, a vast sum (6:210).

Injured: A bear, by Davis, after they get into a fight, the bear resenting Davis' familiarities. Stephen left to patch the bear up (7:217).

Action: A Bedouin squad attacks Jack's party in the desert. The Surprises form a traditional British Square in defense. No one is killed, but the Bedouins make off with all but two of the camels. Only Jack's trunk is saved (7:221-223).

Illness: many of the crew fall prey to dysentery and heat prostration in their march across the desert to Tina (7:224).

Rescued: The entire ship's company, by the transport Dromedary (7:226).

Dead: Several Admirals and Captains, most by illness, but two killed, as posted in the Naval Chronicle (8:227).

Promoted: Admiral Sir Francis Ives, from Vice Admiral of the Blue to Vice Admiral of the Red, an automatic promotion based solely on seniority (8:230).

Illness: Rogers, Mann, and Himmelfahrt to the hospital, reasons unknown (8:233).

Lost: Stephen Maturin's diving bell, stolen by Bedouins in the desert (8:234).

Illness: Admiral Sir Francis Ives, digestive troubles requiring a surgeon's attendance (8:244).

Wounded: Two thieves in the employee of the French, one finger lost and perhaps a pint of blood at the hands of Killick, who caught them rummaging Jack Aubrey's room in search of Hairabedian's private effects. Killick was actually protecting Aubrey's chelengk with fish hooks and a particularly strong rat trap (8:252).

"he thinks a sailor's highest aim is to carry his ship from A to B in the shortest possible time, losing not a minute..." Stephen writing to Diana about Jack (9:262).

Dead: Several hunting dogs by a bear hunted by Jack, Stephen and the Bey. The bear escaped (9:276).

Rescued: Lt. Charles Fielding, husband of Laura Fielding, by Nymphe, from a French squad that had just captured him in a small boat. Fielding managed to lower the sail of the French boat and so make possible his rescue (9:279-81).

Illness: Stephen performs a supra pubic cystotomy aboard Nymphe, assisted by her surgeon as well as those of the Redwing and the Cerberus (9:277).

Wounded: Lt. Charles Fielding, operated on by Stephen for the removal of a musket ball received years ago (9:282).

Dead: Wilson, companion to Fielding, apparently of exposure in a snow storm while escaping the French (9:283) and Corby, hacked to death by the French a few days later. He could not outrun them because of a frostbitten foot. Only Fielding succeeded in escaping (9:286).

"There is not a moment to be lost.' And as he led Stephen aft, 'I am coming too. Ain't that fun?" Peter Calamy to Stephen, hurrying him to a gunroom dinner (10:292).

Prize: A French privateer captured by Surprise on her way back to Malta. This diversion caused the Surprise to be late, so the Dryad arrived first at Malta with the news of Lt. Fielding's rescue, thus endangering Laura Fielding, no longer useful as a French agent (9:297).

Foiled: A plot to kill Laura Fielding. Stephen breaks into Laura Fielding's house, knowing she is in danger. Lesueur and a couple of accomplices enter the house shortly thereafter to wait for her and Stephen overhears them talking of the plot. They are impatient and leave. When Mrs. Fielding arrives Stephen takes her aboard Surprise for safety (9:302+).

Dead: Ponto, Mrs. Fielding's Mastiff, poisoned by French spies as a prelude to killing her (10:307).

Illness: The cook of the Pollux, from eating tainted crab (10:316).

Premonition: Jack Aubrey feels a sense of doom and a feeling of "last time" as he leaves what turns out to be his last dinner with Admiral Harte. Although we are led to believe this is because the Surprise is to be broken up or sold out of the service, it may be the next entry he senses. Jack has had a difficult relationship with Harte over the years, but Harte has treated him well lately. Harte also gave Jack money to free a couple of slaves at Marba (10:318).

Action: A French two-decker, the Mars, of 80 guns and two French frigates intercept Surprise and Admiral Harte's HMS Pollux (64) in Zembra Bay. The frigates chase Surprise while both two-deckers engage. The magazine of the Pollux blows up, sending the ship to the bottom. The Mars is badly damaged. Surprise maneuvers the French 38 gun frigate onto the shoals by the Brother's rocks, where it is later burned, probably by the French themselves. The smaller 28 gun frigate heads for the town of Zambra, whose battery fires on Surprise (10:326).

Dead: Admiral Harte and 500 men aboard Pollux. The very likely were many dead and wounded on the Mars as well; we have no details (10:330).

"we proceed to Zambra without the loss of a minute, engage that miserable Dutch herring-buss and the fort that fired on us..." Jack asking Stephen what he thinks of his plan to avenge the Pollux. Stephen nixes the plan altogether. (10:331) and later. "There is not a minute to lose. Mr Gill, shape me a course for Gibraltar." (10:333).

10: The Far Side of the World

Illness: Influenza, Captain of the Fleet. One of many. There appears to be an epidemic in progress (1:11).

Illness: Two cases of "military fever" in twins (1:31).

Dead: Boulay, French agent on Malta who was in the Admiral's administration "killed himself" before being captured. He was found with a pistol and a wound to his right temple. However, he was left-handed. Also, five Italian accomplices were shot by firing squad at the behest of Wray. These likely included Beppo, Paulo, Luigi, and Giuseppe, mentioned in the previous book (1:31).

Escaped: André Lesueur, French agent on Malta, who "got wind" that the British were closing in. He was likely informed by Wray (1:31).

Dead: The Dey of Zambra, by British agents, arranged by Mr. Polcock and Mr. Eliot (1:31).

Pardoned: Laura Fielding, For spying activities she may have engaged in to support her husband. As a conduit for Stephen Maturin's false information, her "spying" turned quite beneficial to the Crown (1:32).

Rewritten: Jack's account of the failed mission to Zambra, turned into a victory by Yarrow, Secretary to Admiral Sir Francis Ives (1:35).

Promoted: A peer of the realm, Admiral Sir Francis Ives, now at the same level as his two brothers, and accounting for his remarkably good mood toward Jack and others. He is also happy with Jack's good fortune turning the French out of Marga, which happened barely on his watch, and for which he gets some credit that may have helped his current good fortune (1:36).

"there is not a moment to be lost." Admiral Sir Francis Ives to Jack, explaining that his new mission is to intercept the USS Norfolk before she is able to harass the British whaling fleet. (1:39) He repeats himself, "As I said, there is not a moment to lose." (1:40) and affirmed a sentence later in the text, "It was profoundly true that not a moment was to be lost." (2:41).

Saved: HMS Surprise, from the knacker's yard, for now, as Jack has a new mission to intercept the USS Norfolk (1:38).

Promoted: out of Surprise: Mr. Gill, Sailing Master, and Mr. Borrell, Gunner,, both to HMS Burford (74). Abel Hames, Captain of the Maintop to Bosun of the Fly, and Amos Day, Captain of the Foretop, to Bosun of Eclair. Also a result of Admiral Ives' largesse, though a clear loss to Surprise (2:41).

Illness: Maitland, having a tooth extracted at the hospital (2:42).

"There you are, Doctor,' he cried on seeing Stephen." Jack to Stephen as the crew is provisioning Surprise for her new mission (2:57).

Illness: Maturin observes Higgins extract two teeth, at least, as he is interviewing him for Surgeon's Assistant (2:58).

"No, no, Mowett, let us not delay him for a moment," Jack not wanting to disturb the new gunner. This is a marginal occurrence since it is just slightly beyond the usual phrasing, though certainly the sentiment is there (2:67).

Impotent: Mr. Horner, Gunner, confessing to Dr. Maturin (3:112).

"It was still there [a tropical bird]—still watched by Martin, who had refused his dinner in order not to lose a moment of its presence." Surprise had just crossed the tropical line (4:115).

Illness: Mrs. Lamb, the carpenter's wife and many of the crew of Defender who had transferred to Surprise, of seasickness in the doldrums, which caused the ship to roll more than usual (4:121).

Rescued: Stephen Maturin, by Jack Aubrey, from drowning, while they were swimming (4:121).

Drowned: An unpopular man during the horseplay of crossing the Equator aboard Formidable, when Jack Aubrey was a Master's Mate (4:133).

Affair of Heart: Mrs. Horner, the gunner's wife, and Mr. Hollom, midshipman (4:134+).

Lost: Bowsprit of Surprise, in a heavy lightning storm, making her effectively uncontrollable. They are forced to take her to Penedo to a yard owned by Mr. Lopez for repairs (4:154).

"... There is not a moment to lose—think what flats we should look, was the Norfolk to pass by while we were sitting here..." Jack to Stephen begging him to allow the shipyard owner plenty of sleep so he would replace the bowsprit quickly (5:159).

Dead: Two Llamas at the top of an Andes pass in a snow storm, an account from two Peruvians who are guests of Mr. Lopez (5:160).

Wounded: Rev Mr. Martin, his hand bitten to the bone by an "owl faced night ape." (5:162).

"Let us imitate him. There is not a moment to lose." Stephen to Mr. Martin. Stephen is anxious to tend to Mr. Martin's wound (5:163).

Aground: Surprise, at very high tide, on a sandbar that was not normally covered. The pilot was drunk and inattentive. The ship had to be unloaded completely to reduce weight, and after several days they managed to refloat her. The good: They were able to clean the copper bottom. The bad: Norfolk sailed right past Penedo (5:167).

"For now there was not a moment, not a single moment to lose." The opinion of every seaman, knowing the falling tide put the Surprise in grave danger (5:168).

Pregnant: Mrs. Horner, by Mr. Hollom (5:177).

Dead: One sheep, shorn in the tropics because of the heat, died in the cold of the southern latitudes (5:180).

Illness: Mrs. Horner becomes very ill as a result of a botched abortion attempt by Higgins (5:182).

Prize: Taken without a shot, Danaë, a packet taken by Norfolk, retaken by Surprise. The prizemaster is Lieutenant Lawrence, a relative of Captain Lawrence, late of the Chesapeake (5:188).

Found: A massive treasure of banknotes in a secret compartment aboard Danaë. Stephen had instructions on exactly where to look (5:191).

Injured: Joe Plaice, a fractured skull when his head hit a ring bolt in a fall down a ladder. He was trepanned by Stephen and Mr. Martin, a 3 shilling piece used to patch the hole in his skull (5:193-4).

Sick Bay Report: A "thundering long great sick list" of strained articulations, crushed fingers, and broken bones, after a 3-day storm. John Nesbitt, midshipman, broke a collar bone (5:197).

Injured: Stephen Maturin: bruised, shaken, battered, and strained as he fell into the hold off a ladder while attempting to avoid the ship's cat (5:202).

Dead: Warley. Washed out to sea when a footrope gave away (5:202).

Injured: Jenkins, his ribs stove in; Rogers, lost an arm, and Jack Aubrey, nails torn off, a few of many new cases due to yet another storm (5:203).

Illness: Signs of scurvy aboard (5:203).

Dead: Two unnamed seamen, buried at sea off Diego Ramirez (6:209).

"There you are, Doctor. There you are, Mr. Martin. I am sorry to have torn you from your botanizing..." Surprise has seen a ship and is leaving Diego Ramirez in a hurry (6:212).

Sick Bay Report: Boyle, 3 ribs stove in; Williamson, two toes and the tips of his ears taken by frostbite. (6:209). Mr. Calamy's scurvy has made him bald. One broken leg that would not knit (likely due to scurvy), 1 amputated forearm with gangrene after frostbite, one tertiary syphilis (6:211) moving to paralysis. And Mr. Horner hurt his leg (6:214).

Dead: Mrs. Horner and Mr. Hollom, killed by Mr. Horner, who returned from shore with blood on him. Aubrey listed Hollom as "R" for "Run" in the ship's log (6:218).

Taken and Burned: One whaler burned, and Acapulco taken by USS Norfolk, as related by the crew of the Spanish merchant ship Estrella Polar (6:219).

Injured: Compton, by Mr. Horner, in an argument. Compton informed Mr. Horner that his wife's illness was due to pregnancy (6:222).

Accused: Stephen Maturin, of abortion by Mr. Horner. Padeen restrains Horner as Stephen patiently explains that he would never do such a thing (6:222).

Dead: Higgins, missing from the ship, likely given a "Jonah's Lift" by Mr. Horner, who discovered by the process of elimination that it must have been Higgins who had 'operated' on Mrs. Horner (6:224).

Dead: Mr. Horner, gunner, hung himself. Slipped over the side without ceremony in a hammock, two shot at his feet (6:227).

"Quite right: there was not a moment to lose." Jack to Mr. Allen, on Mr. Allen apologizing for changing course to head toward a whaler without Jack's express permission (6:229).

Prize: Acapulco, captured by Norfolk, recaptured by Surprise. Stuffed with needed spars, not to mention $100,000 worth of oil (6:234).

"there is not a moment to be lost." Jack's plan is to have Mr. Allen take the Acapulco into Valparaiso, where they have prize agents, parole the Americans there as well, and sail toward the Galapagos as soon as possible (6:237).

Rescued: Six whalers in a small boat at Galapagos. (7:245) These include Moses Thomas (7:246), Hogg (7:255), Bill (9:316), and Edwards (10:342).

Action: Norfolk took Intrepid Fox. The whalers recount that Norfolk loaded all the oil from Intrepid Fox into another captured British whaler, the Amelia, then burned the Fox. The small whaling boat escaped the fate because they had been pulled away by a whale and came back through the fog. They were able to hide in an inlet until after Norfolk had left, heading due west, toward the Marquesas (7:245-6).

"there is not a moment to lose over tortoises or caviar or cream in our tea" now that Jack knew the direction and approximate distance to Norfolk. He argues with Stephen, who had thought he was promised some quality time in the islands. "...there is not a moment to be lost—could I conscientiously delay for the sake of an iguano or a beetle—interesting, no doubt, but of no immediate application in warfare? Candidly, now?" (7:247).

Illness: Midshipman Blakeney, who swallowed a four pound shot. Maturin succeeded in getting him to throw it up (7:250).

"there was not a moment to spare, it was true; but then not every moment had to be flogged." Surprise in chase, but not with Norfolk in sight (7:255).

Rescued: Stephen Maturin, by Jack Aubrey. Stephen fell out of the Great Cabin into the wake of Surprise (7:261).

Lost: Both Stephen and Jack, who had expected a boat towed astern which was no longer there. Surprise sailed on (7:261).

Rescued: Jack and Stephen, by a Polynesian Pahi crewed by women who had recently killed all the men (7:266).

Abandoned: but also saved, Stephen and Jack, left on a small uncharted island with some line and a couple of fishhooks by Manu. This action kept them from being killed by the rest of the crew (7:277).

Rescued: Jack and Stephen, by Bonden, et al in their launch (8:286).

Sick Bay Report: A dozen wounds inflicted by the women of the Pahi on Surprise's boarding party, including Mr. Martin, who endured a spearhead in his calf and 36 stitches in his scalp (7:291).

"There you are, Stephen,' with a smile..." They are both happy to be back in familiar surroundings aboard Surprise (8:293).

Illness: Mr. Adams, a fit of the Strong Fives, after eating and drinking too much in celebration of Stephen's rescue, but requiring Stephen's attention (9:296).

Lost: Two teeth, by Jack while fighting long ago (9:306).

Injured: Stephen Maturin, hit his head on an iron breech of a gun when flung to the waist. Comatose (9:309).

Injured: Hogg, the whaler, a broken arm, along with many others as Surprise encounters the tail end of a typhoon (9:312).

Dead: 80 or 90 survivors of USS Norfolk, now sunk off Old Sodbury Island, from the same hurricane, out of what was probably a crew of 300. It's difficult to tell how many dead because Norfolk had sent prize crews home in several captured whalers. 150 dead is a reasonable estimate (9:326).

Peace: Claimed by Norfolk's crew, who stated they had gotten the news from both an American and a British ship. Jack does not believe them (9:327).

Recovered: Stephen Maturin, from a comatose state, seconds before Mr. Butcher, Surgeon of Norfolk, was to use a trephine on him, much to Mr. Butcher's disappointment (9:329).

Dead: Norfolk's midshipman and 2nd Lieutenant, eaten by sharks when attempting to retrieve material from the sunken ship (9:330). Also, her Bosun and 1st Lieutenant were drowned in the wreck (10:348).

Dead and wounded: An account of the Leopard's action with the Chesapeake years earlier (tabulated prior as "a score"). In this account 21 Americans were killed or wounded (9:333).

Lost: Surprise. A storm results in the Surprise being blown off station. This creates a precarious situation because the shipwrecked crew of Norfolk is 80-90 people, about four times the number of Surprises on shore (9:335).

Stolen: Several woodworking tools belonging to Surprise, by the crew of the Norfolk (10:335).

Dead: An account of the mutiny aboard Hermione. Murdered were Captain Pigot, three lieutenants, the Marine officer, the purser, clerk, surgeon, and bosun, and a midshipman, Drogo Montague's boy, 13, (RM:1:23). They were hunted through the ship and killed (10:339).

Injured and Wounded: Two Surprise men were attacked and bitten by Moray Eels, several ate poisoned fish that caused black vomit and temporary blindness. Seamen who stepped on sea urchins and became lame because of the spikes were "ten a penny" (10:343).

"...there is not a moment to be lost. Follow me at your own pace." Jack to Stephen after Jack has seen an American whaler headed for the island. And to Mr. Lamb, "There is not a moment to lose," asking that their launch be lengthened to enable it to hold the entire crew (10:354), and later, also to Mr. Lamb, '...there is not a moment to lose: all hands will work double tides." (10:355).

Wounded: a broken arm of John Adams, of the Norfolk, inflicted by a carpenter's maul in a fight with the crew of Surprise (10:365).

Action: Relationships between the marooned crews of Norfolk and Surprise steadily worsen. The captain of Norfolk, with most of his officers gone, has little authority, and a number of his crew are British deserters, several from the notorious Hermione. The Surprises have armed themselves with makeshift pikes. They have also lengthened their launch in preparation for leaving the island, a tempting target for the Norfolk crew to take. The appearance of an American whaler off shore excites the Norfolks to action. Several gang up to capture and kill Haines, a Hermione deserter who has taken up with the Surprises. Others prevent the Surprise launch from getting to sea. But their delight changes as they realize the whaler is acting strangely, particularly as she strikes her colors to her pursuer, HMS Surprise (10:264-66).

Dead and Wounded: Haines, of the Norfolk. Several other crew members of Norfolk were at least injured in the subsequent battle by the two crews. Jack is seen swinging his sword and has blood up to his arm, but we have no accounting of the actual wounded (10:365) other than that they were "knocked on the head." (RM:1:23).

11: The Reverse of the Medal

Prize: William Enderby, recaptured off Bahia, with three other ships' catch also aboard, worth $97,000 (1:19).

Illness: Mr. Waters, surgeon aboard Irresistible, has a tumor. Stephen examines him and tells him that though it is benign, it must be removed (1:26-31).

Recognized: Sam Panda, a Catholic cleric, inquires for Jack Aubrey with a message from Ashgrove Cottage. It is obvious to all who meet him that his features mirror Aubrey's in detail, though ebony in color, and that he is Jack's son. Sam gives Jack the whale tooth he had carved while a midshipman aboard HMS Resolution, a gift he had given Sam's mother, Sally Mputa. Sally has also made Jack a talisman to prevent drowning (1:33-36).

Rescued: Jack, by Heneage Dundas "from a watery grave." No other details, but this likely was when they were serving together as midshipmen (2:43).

Illness: Captain Palmer of the Norfolk, of quartan ague and melancholia. Stephen treats him with Jesuit's bark and sassafras, then with laudanum (2:51).

Dead: Two men on the outer yardarms on Hermione, fell to their deaths on deck while attempting to not be the last two off the masts, under threat of a flogging by Captain Pigot, who ordered their bodies thrown overboard. This was immediately prior to the mutiny (2:49).

Promoted: William Honey, from Master's Mate to Acting Lieutenant (2:65).

"...and it seems to me that with a fair wind I might find her this side of the Azores; though of course there would not be a moment to lose." Jack to Admiral Sir William Pellew, regarding his pursuit of the privateer Spartan (2:67).

Dead: Mr. Waters, surgeon of Irresistible, from an operation on a potentially cancerous tumor, perhaps by infection from the operation itself (3:72).

Rescued: Awkward Davies & Howard, for the third or fourth time by Jack Aubrey as the blue cutter capsized and sank in a chase of Spartan (3:97).

Prize: Thwarted. The Surprise is chasing the privateer Spartan in heavy weather, but runs into the channel fleet. Jack is reprimanded by the (unnamed) Admiral for "whoring after prizes." (3:112-4:113).

Dead: En Ramon d'Ullastret Casademon, Stephen Maturin's Catalan godfather, who left him a considerable fortune (4:116).

Dead: Tennent's Uncle, who was Captain of the Phoebe when it was to be broken up. It hastened his death to have the ship destroyed (4:119).

"...and then I shall not lose a minute when dinner is put on the table." Jack at his lodgings, "The Ship," (an Inn) waiting for his dinner (4:120).

Action: Ellis Palmer (Black Coat) has befriended Jack and offers to share a chaise to London. However, the ownership of the last chaise is disputed by two others at the dinner table, a "Quaker," and a "Flash Cove." As Jack shows up at the appointed meeting place he sees Palmer being attacked by the other two. He wades into the battle and beats them off (4:124).

Reward: In their subsequent discussion aboard the chaise Mr. Palmer appears to know a great deal about Jack and Stephen. Mr. Palmer offers to reward Jack for his help. He claims to have just come from France aboard the cartel with the news that peace was at hand. He suggests that Jack invest all he can in a list of stocks he supplies, so that Jack will be rewarded when the stocks rise. (4:129-130) Jack proceeds to tell Stephen of the scheme, and also General Aubrey, his father (4:136).

Burned: The Grapes, the inn where Stephen keeps a room year around. Mrs. Broad, the proprietress, is living in the country until the insurance issues can be settled (4:139).

Affair: Diana accuses Stephen of adultery with Mrs. Fielding and runs off to Sweden with Gedymin Jagiello, herself suspected of the same thing. Both accusations are untrue (5:141-2).

"Why, Stephen, there you are,' cried Jack..." Jack meeting Stephen, intent on giving Stephen the list of stocks he received from Ellis Palmer (5:143).

Reinstated: Sir John Barrow, as 2nd Secretary of the Admiralty. He had been replaced by Andrew Wray while he was ill (5:147).

Stolen: Stephen's pocket is picked clean while going to the White Horse (5:148).

Demoted: Sir Joseph Blaine, injured from a fall from his horse for a few days, finds his duties as Chief of Intelligence curtailed, along with those of his most trusted colleagues (5:148).

Revealed: Stephen's packet from Danaë again burst open in front of Sir Joseph Blaine revealing a huge treasure in banknotes made out to bearer (5:151).

Discarded: Surprise is to be sold out of the service to the highest bidder (5:156).

Born: To Heneage Dundas, another on the wrong side of the blanket, laid at his door (5:157).

Action: In an attempt to return the strongbox full of treasure to the Admiralty, Stephen encounters a low-level functionary named Mr. Lewis, who treats him in an odious manner. Stephen shook him furiously by the nose, extracting blood, which he wiped on Lewis' neck cloth. Expecting a challenge and duel to follow, Stephen tells Mr. Lewis he is at Black's (5:161).

Dead: Smith, the Admiralty official who Mr. Lewis replaced (5:161).

Undelivered: Stephen's letter to Diana, obliquely explaining his alleged affair with Mrs. Fielding. Andrew Wray falsely tells Stephen that although he had attempted to deliver it, Diana was gone by the time he got there (5:167).

Dead: Two bankers found guilty of forgery are hung in London (5:170).

Born: to Frances Williams, Sophia's sister, in Ireland, a boy (6:182).

Engaged: Rev. Mr. Nathaniel Martin, to Polly, daughter of a parson (6:189).

Arrested: Jack Aubrey, for stock market fraud (6:198).

Fled: General Aubrey, Jack's father, skipped bail and disappeared to avoid trial in the fraud case (7:201).

Revealed: Mr. Pratt has determined that "Ellis Palmer" is a fake name (7:202).

Illness: Mr. Martin, a strangulated hernia, operated on by Stephen (7:204).

"Do that, if you please, Mr Pratt, and pray waste not a minute: there is not a moment to be lost." Stephen to Mr. Pratt as they try to find Ellis Palmer (7:208).

Imprisoned: Jack Aubrey is imprisoned at Marshalsea to await trial (7:212).

Dead: Mr. Ellis Palmer, a French agent whose actual name was Paul Ogle, found drowned in the Thames, eliminated by Wray and associates before he could implicate them in the Stock Market fraud scheme. They had been alerted by Stephen's offer of a high reward. Ironically, Wray himself made a good deal of money in the fraud, some of which he paid to Stephen to square his gambling debt. Stephen, who had recently inherited from his godfather, used the same sum to offer a reward for Palmer, the only witness who could prove Jack innocent. The high amount of the reward came to the attention of Wray, who had him eliminated (7:217).

Wounded: Admiral Sir James, bitten on the finger by Mr. Goodridge, once Master of HMS Polychrest, resulting in Mr. Goodridge meeting Jack while jailed. The Admiral is identified as a rear Admiral of the Blue (7:224).

Entrapped: Sir Joseph Blaine is sure of a traitor and so sets up a trap to see who will attempt to negotiate one of the bonds turned into the Admiralty (7:234).

Purchased: Surprise, by Stephen, and set up as a privateer with the help of Sir Joseph Blaine (8:245).

"'Besides, I must start back directly. Mr Lawrence may wish to call me as a witness on the third day, so there is not a moment to lose.' The chaise lost not a moment:" Jack to Pullings, after Stephen purchased Surprise. (9:246).

Guilty: Jack Aubrey, of stock market fraud. (8:248) He is sentenced to a £2500 fine and an hour in the pillory. He is not sentenced to prison because of a contemplated mission to South America (9:260).

Awarded: to Surprise, Letters of Marque against France, Holland, America, two Italian republics, Pappenburgh, and several others (9:259).

Lost: Funds in the Stock Market. Ironically, Jack Aubrey loses money in the stock market fraud he is said to have initiated (9:264).

Rescued: Jack Aubrey, from harm at the pillory, by hundreds, perhaps thousands of seamen, who surrounded him and prevented him from being assaulted. In particular, Bonden, Davis, and Davis' four uglier brothers dispense with a gang of hoodlums with rocks hired by Wray to seriously harm Jack (9:266-7).

Awarded: In addition to the Letters of Marque, Surprise is also awarded a letter of exemption for her seaman from pressing and a letter authorizing the use of the King's shipyards for any necessary refitting (10:269).

Recovered: The Blue Peter diamond, Diana's diamond, from Duhamel (10:278).

Revealed: by Duhamel. French intelligence had set up a trap for Stephen on the pretense of the arrest of Madame de la Feuillade. Blaine had suggested Stephen should not attend to this matter, and just later, Wray had suggested he go (10:279).

Defected: Duhamel, who asks Stephen for passage to Canada, which Stephen arranges with Heneage Dundas, who is about to sail to North America (10:279-84).

Traitors: Duhamel gives money to Andrew Wray and Edward Ledward in exchange for intelligence information from the Admiralty. He then gives the information to Stephen before preparing to sail to Canada (10:284).

"Charles, Charles, pray send a lad with this to Sir Joseph Blaine's in Shepherd Market post haste—there is not a moment to be lost." Stephen to Charles as Sir Joseph Blaine is walking up the steps of Black's at that very moment (10:287).

Table 11-2: Met or mentioned elsewhere in The Reverse of the Medal

- 1. For crew members of HMS Surprise, see table 8-4.
- 2. This is certainly Dick Richardson because he is called "Spotted Dick" in the text.
- 3. Stephen must have forgotten that Lt. Rowan had failed to re-join the ship at Gibraltar at the beginning of their South Sea voyage. It is impossible that Rowan could be aboard.
- 4. This could be a typo for "Dray" who appears on the very next page.
- 5. The reference is simply "Sir James," and a Rear Admiral of the Blue. Saumarez had been promoted to Vice Admiral of the Red by the time of SM:7:212, four promotions from Rear Admiral of the Blue. The timeframe seems constrained here.
- 6. Stephen visits the Wray household after Jack's conviction. Only Fanny (nee Harte) is home, and she persistently refers to Babbington as "Charles." (RM:9:262)

12: The Letter of Marque

"Why, there you are, Doctor. How happy I am to see you." Stephen reports aboard Surprise, as surgeon—and owner (1:25).

Gift: From Admiral Russell to Jack Aubrey, a letter written to the Admiral by Lord Nelson, Jack's hero (1:29).

"Hush,' said the Admiral, cocking an eye to Schank. 'Old Purchase is fast asleep. Let us creep away, and I will run you back to your ship; the breeze serves, and you will not lose a minute of your tide." Admiral Russell to Jack (1:32).

Escaped: Andrew Wray and Edward Ledward, escaped from near arrest at Button's. However, papers found at Wray's house implicate him in the stock scandal so that it is now obvious to all that Jack was set up (2:46).

Dead: Duhamel. He fell in the water wearing a belt filled with his gold fortune when attempting to board at Spithead. Dundas had agreed to take him to Canada (2:47).

Sick Bay Report: Bruises, burns, crushed toes and fingers, and a broken leg—from gunnery practice aboard Surprise (2:54).

Injured: Padeen Colman, in an heroic act, stopped Jumpin' Billy, a hot cannon which had broken loose, with his bare hand. The blood from his wounded hand boiled as it hit the hot gun. Stephen gave Padeen some laudanum for pain, professing it a wonder drug, and this is the beginning of Padeen's addiction to opium (2:55).

Injured: Several scalded by an exploding "digesting machine" aboard Babbington's Tartarus because crew members by-passed its safety valve (2:62).

Injured: Jack Aubrey, dashed against the beams while in his cot during a particularly severe lurch of the ship in a storm. The resulting bandage covered the top of his head and one eye (3:67).

Prize: Surprise takes Merlin, the consort of the Spartan (3:71-2).

"once more Stephen heard the words 'there is not a moment to be lost'," Jack now understands the Spartan's plans and seeks to intercept her (3:76).

Illness: Padeen Colman, an impacted wisdom tooth. Stephen gives him yet more laudanum (3:80).

Rescued: Joe Plaice, fell overboard while painting, rescued by Merlin (3:81).

"There you are, Doctor,' cried Jack." Stephen has been called up the quarterdeck to see a school of sperm whales (3:86).

Addiction: Padeen Colman concocts a scheme to steal opium from Stephen by taking the laudanum, filling the bottle with brandy, thus diluting it, then filling the brandy bottle with water to dilute it (3:88).

Action: Surprise versus the privateer Spartan. The Spartan is intent on capturing the Spanish ship Azul, full of a valuable load of quicksilver. Surprise has been disguised to look like the Azul, but the work is in vain as Surprise approaches a battle in progress. Azul is driven onto the Formigas rocks and Spartan pulls alongside to take the treasure. The crew of the Surprise sneaks up in boats from the other side and boards Azul, then Spartan, in a classic "Lord Nelson's Bridge" move. Azul sinks in place as Surprise takes Spartan (3:104+).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey, a glancing pike thrust grazed his neck in battle (3:104).

Wounded: The Gunner, arm in a sling with a bloody wound and Webster, with a wound in the belly (3:105).

Dead: Captain of Spartan, in the action with Azul. Three corpses seen on deck of Azul by Jack (3:105).

Dead: There had to have been scores of casualties in both Azul and Spartan, though they are not specifically mentioned. The surviving officer of Spartan mentions that the remaining Azul crew members fled in boats, but that there weren't many left. Jack also mentions that it was a very bloody fight and that there were only two dozen Spartans left aside from the wounded and that the gun decks were "aswim with blood." Both Azul and Spartan, being essentially men of war, had to have had a crew of 200 apiece at the very least. This means that there were likely upwards of 300 dead and wounded (3:105-106).

Taken: Eight prizes altogether: Merlin, Spartan, and five prizes coaxed out of Horta harbor, plus the cargo of the sunken Azul. Stephen talked the signal man out of the code, which was simply the flying of the Blue Peter flag and a gun to windward. The Merlin, which was known to the prize crews, did so and the five prizes simply sailed out to be captured. Two of the five prizes are named: John Busby and Pretty Anne (3:105).

"Now, Tom,' said Jack, 'returning to prizes, there is not a minute to be lost. The Doctor will curse, I know," Jack to Tom Pullings on the need to get the prizes away from the Azores as soon as possible since the USS Constitution is known to be in the area and was to rendezvous with the Spartan (3:106).

Noticed: Stephen notices that the effects of the laudanum are somewhat diminished. But he does not yet understand what is happening (4:108).

Reinstated: Sir Joseph Blaine is reinstated as head of Naval Intelligence as the full impact of the scandal is realized (4:110).

Rebuilt: The Grapes is rebuilt in its old image (4:110).

Fired: A few seaman aboard Surprise for violating terms of conduct which included no stealing from the prizes (4:117).

Illness: Padeen Colman, his wisdom tooth was extracted in London (4:123).

Uninsured: The Blue Peter and the Surprise, much to the chagrin of Sir Joseph Blaine (4:124).

Injured: Three men who made fun of Padeen's "rabbit-like" bandage. One man with a compound fracture of the leg, one man with severe burns where Padeen held him in the fireplace, and one quite wet by jumping into a lake in St. James Park to escape Padeen (4:133).

Aground: A revenue cutter checking out the Surprise as a possible smuggler in Polcombe Cove, where they are practicing the coming action (5:153).

Rescued: Five Surprises by Jack in one night alone, during exercises held in preparation for taking the Diane (5:154).

Sick Bay Report: Strains, barked shins, cracked ribs. Thomas Edwards, a top man, suffered a compound fracture of the femur (5:157).

Promoted: William Babbington, from Commander to Post Captain. Babbington's family has quite a lot of influence in Parliament. This event helps Jack immensely, because Babbington is no longer under pressure to perform to gain promotion (6:170).

Action: Surprise (28) takes Diane (30), two gunboats, and two merchantmen from St. Martin's harbor. Surprise anchors offshore and pretends to pound the city when in fact, the guns are firing without shot. Boat crews from the Surprise, HMS Tartarus, commanded by Babbington, plus the Dolphin, Camel, and Vulture, sneak into the harbor with the intent to cut out the Diane. Problems ensue with the moorings and rather than cut out just the Diane they wind up taking all five ships on the quay as the French attempt to stop them by riding their horses onto the deck. The action is pivotal in several respects. First, William Babbington, made Post Captain anyway, understands that Jack needs this action on his record, so Babbington stands aside to let Jack get the credit. Secondly, this is precisely the kind of action needed by Jack for reinstatement, because he took a French warship of equal or superior power, not just a privateer like the Spartan (6:195+).

Dead: Diane's Captain, shot by Stephen, then run through by Stephen's sword (6:195).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey. A saber cut in the right forearm, a slash to his thigh, and a bullet in the back. Stephen operates to get the bullet out (7:199).

Dead and Wounded: No dead, three abdominal wounds. Mr. Bentley fell and was bruised, and many kicks and bites from the attacking horses. There had to have been many casualties on the French side, but these are not enumerated except for Stephen operating on the French quartermaster with a lung wound (7:201+).

Escaped: Paul Ségura, the "Red Admiral," a particularly nasty French intelligence agent. Stephen captured him, but was careless, so Ségura dressed up in women's clothing and was returned to the French mainland. Stephen did manage to get many valuable papers, however (7:204).

Pardon: Offered by Soames to Jack Aubrey at the Grapes. Jack refuses on the grounds that he was never guilty, therefore there is nothing to be pardoned for. Widely seen as a defeat for Jack and the move to reinstate him (7:219).

Dead: General Aubrey, Jack's father, found in a ditch near the ale house where he had been living under an assumed name, Captain Woolcombe, in an attempt to avoid trial in the Stock Market scheme (8:221).

Affair: Recounted. Jack and the second Mrs. Aubrey, a dairy maid before she married Jack's father. (8:223)

Inherited: Jack Aubrey inherits the family estate at Woolcombe (7:226).

Offered: A seat in Parliament to Jack Aubrey, by his "Cousin Edward Norton," an elderly friend of his grandfather. Cousin Edward owns all the land in the seat and can dictate, more or less, how his tenants will vote (7:227).

Gift: To Philip Aubrey, Jack's much younger half-brother, the pistol ball dug out of his spine by Stephen after the Diane action. Philip wants something of Jack's to show off at school (7:227).

Reinstatement: Heneage Dundas, brother of First Lord of the Admiralty Melville and long-time friend of Jack Aubrey, is dispatched on a mission to Ashgrove Cottage to extract a promise from Jack to be mild and to support the Navy in Parliament in exchange for re-instatement to the Post Captain's list. This time, he succeeds (7:233).

"...'they can drop him off at Stockholm without the loss of a minute and it will save him all this wearisome toiling and moiling..." Sir Joseph Blaine to Stephen on telling him of the arrangements to send him to Stockholm in the Leopard, which is now a transport ship (7:234).

Recognized: Stephen Maturin. The present crew did not know Stephen was an old Leopard until they spied his sea chest with the Leopard's name crossed out. They suddenly grow friendly and Stephen recounts the story of the Waakzaamheid over and over again to the entranced crew (7:248).

Returned: The Blue Peter diamond, to Diana (9:268).

Promoted: Gedymin Jagiello, to Colonel (9:268)

Injured: Stephen Maturin, in Sweden, when he fell after Diane showed him her balloon. He was severely dosed on laudanum at the time. He suffered a severe fracture of the leg, and a nasty gash in his side where the bottle of laudanum had broken and pierced him when he fell. He was in a coma for several days. His treating doctors recognize his addiction (9:271).

Reconciled: Stephen and Diana after Stephen explains his intelligence activities to Diana. It didn't hurt that Stephen was now wealthy enough to keep Diana in the manner to which she was accustomed (9:280).

In Irons: Padeen Colman, who became violent when Mr. Martin caught him siphoning laudanum. Stephen came to understand how its effect had lightened on him and how he had overdosed himself when he had a full strength bottle (9:282).

Table 12-2: Crew of Surprise as a Letter of Margue (3rd commission).

- The crew of the old Surprise, which spanned several books, has been paid off. The start of the new crew is at Shelmerston when the Surprise, now owned by Stephen Maturin, is about to embark on a voyage as a Letter of Marque. The crew continues though ThirteenGun Salute clear through to the beginning of The Commodore. One could claim a second commission at the end of Letter of Marque. The ship did come into port and several crew members retired on their prize money.
- 2. Smith: There may be two or three. In Letter Of Marque, "Mr. Smith" was assigned to the Blue Cutter. In Nutmeg of Consolation, we have both John and Peter Smith listed. This is probably a third "Smith," a warrant officer addressed as "Mr."
- 3. Johnson. We meet Darkie Johnson in Letter of Marque. In Nutmeg of Consolation Jack greets a Surprise named Johnson as well. They are listed separately, but very well could be the same man. In Wine-Dark Sea it is certain that William Johnson and Darkie Johnson are the same man (WDS 9:190)
- 4. Arthur Grimble is listed as Killick's mate several times in Wine-Dark Sea: 1:19, 9:192, 10:257. William Grimshaw is also listed as Killick's mate in Wine-Dark Sea: 2:35, 6:136,

- 10:226, and joined in Nutmeg of Consolation at Batavia (4:100). It's worth noting that an "Art Grimble" died of the pox in Thirteen Gun Salute (5:157)
- 5. In its somewhat ambiguous nature as a "Hired ship" the Surprise carries three midshipmen. (5:109) Weddell was a ransomer, a prisoner aboard Franklin, and must have come from one of the whalers taken by the Franklin. He berths with the Midshipman, but he could be there because of his age rather than position.
- 6. It is at this point well known that Davis and Davies are sometimes mixed up. But Awkward Davies himself (TGS:1:26) is mentioned just a few pages prior to Davis. (TGS:2:50) We have listed them separately this time.

Table 12-3: Met or mentioned elsewhere in The Letter of Marque

- 1. Likely William Mowett.
- 2. He is not mentioned by name in the text
- 3. Part of Fanny's tortured explanation of why she called Babbington "Charles" instead of William in the last volume. He was dressed as the Young Pretender, Charles Edward Stewart, who led an uprising to restore James Stuart to the throne.
- 4. See http://www.watermenshall.org for a history of the race
- 5. In RM 6:194 she is referred to as "Polly".
- 6. The boats are about to attack Diane in the dark. A Frenchman on shore asks if the boat contains a "Guillaume."
- 7. The Dixon affair is very convoluted. Please see Table 13-3, Note 3 for an explanation.

13: The Thirteen Gun Salute

Built: Seven new ale houses, called collectively the Aubrey Arms, by seamen who retired on their prize money (1:11).

Pregnant: Diana, by Stephen (1:16).

Married: Again, but in a real church this time, Stephen Maturin and Diana Villiers. There is no sense whether this was a Catholic or an Anglican church (1:18).

"When there was some naval advantage to be gained by losing not a minute, where weather-gage, chase, engagement or escape were concerned, vessels under Aubrey's command were liable to slip their cables and fly off beyond recall..." (1:24).

"since all this horrible, unseamanlike confusion must be reduced to order without the loss of a moment." (1:25).

Transported: Padeen Colman, his death sentence commuted due to Jack's influence as a member of Parliament, for breaking into an apothecary shop in Edinburgh to steal laudanum. He had deserted the ship at Leith (1:30).

Rescued and Injured: Standish, the Purser, by Jack. The pilot attempted to help him with a boat hook, but missed and hit his scalp instead. It was all unnecessary; the purser could swim quite well (1:33).

Lost: Mona, Stephen's lover during the Irish insurrection in 1798. We do not know the circumstances of this loss, which could range from her death in the insurrection to her simply leaving him for political reasons. Stephen had refused to engage in violence and became estranged to the movement (1:47 & 4:89).

"Why, Stephen, there you are,' cried Jack..." Stephen has just attempted to sabotage the course of the Surprise with a magnet near the compass, but has failed. He is afraid the Surprise will capture the chase, where Robert Gough is aboard. If he is caught, he will be hung for his activities with the United Irishmen (2:52).

Refused: A stranger requests that Stephen meet Sir Joseph Blaine in Portugal. Stephen suspects a trap by French agents and refuses the invitation. It turns out Sir Joseph really is in Portugal, but it takes an official embassy communication to convince Stephen (3:69-70).

Ordained: Sam Panda. Stephen obtained the blessing of the Patriarch of Portugal, the last formality before the ordination could take place (3:74).

Exposed: The mission to South America was exposed to the Spanish authorities. The English responded that it was the French who were engaged on just such a mission, and, rather belatedly, they produced the papers found on the Diane to prove it. However, this forces a change in plans for Surprise and Jack Aubrey (3:79).

Posted: Not exactly, since Surprise is still a privateer, but Pullings takes command of Surprise while Jack and Stephen return to England overland (4:83).

"it was clear to everyone concerned—that this was still another of those naval occasions on which there was not a moment to be lost..." (4:84).

"Oh Stephen,' called Sophie, 'pray bring him out and let us all go home together at once. I do not want to lose a minute of him..." Jack is unexpectedly back in England (4:92).

Reinstated: to the List: "Captain John Aubrey, Royal Navy, is restored to the List with his former rank and seniority, and is appointed to the Diane, of thirty-two guns." From the Gazette (4:94).

Vote Solicited: Immediately after restoring Jack to the List Lord Melville solicits a vote on a private matter from Jack (4:96).

Wounded: (an account). Lt. Elliott, in an action between Sylph and Flèche (4:100).

"for there is not a moment to be lost." Jack to Mr. Edward Fox, the British envoy, in arranging quarters for him for the coming voyage. Fox replies, "For as you rightly say, we cannot spare a minute..." (4:105).

Dead: The entire crew of a whaler as it dashed against Inaccessible Island, as related by Thomas Adam, as Diane drifts toward the rocks and a similar fate. This prompts Jack to launch the boats at once to pull the Diane away (5:124).

Injured: James Fielding, 1st Lt, tied to his cot with a broken leg, (5:121), caused by a recoiling gun when the gun captain fired too soon (5:141).

Injured: Raikes, also a broken tibia and fibula, by a recoiling gun. Gangrene set in and his leg had to be amputated (5:140).

"'There you are, Doctor,' said Jack. 'How is your patient?'" Jack is asking after Raikes (5:140).

Illnesses: Two syphilitic gummata, near their ends, some serious pulmonary cases (5:140).

Illness: Edward Fox, the envoy, claims to be constipated. Stephen gave him a placebo (5:147).

Sick Bay report: Strains, twisted joints, torn muscles, cracked ribs, another broken leg, rope burns, galley stove burns, chilblains, and a hernia, all after a severe storm (5:149).

"There you are, Doctor,' cried Jack." He wanted Stephen to see a brilliant, cold morning after a storm (5:150).

Dead: Arthur Grimble, of syphilis (5:157).

Illness: Edward Fox, the envoy, is bled and purged by Stephen, who did not like the look of his belly. Fox continued to be in pain and discomfort (5:165).

"Stephen looked for Jack Aubrey, but found to his disappointment that he had already set off for Anjer to bring the Diane up to Batavia, so that not a moment should be lost." (6:175).

Lost: Ten hands at Java, who could not be found in time for sailing (6:179).

Affair: Alleged, Stephen Maturin and his "sleeping partner" when Maturin takes a room in a brothel (6:192). There is some doubt this is a true affair, though his shipmates certainly think so. He is described as passive and being able to take the sacrament without confession. On the other hand she has to interrupt at one point to retrieve her pants (8:237). This may have been a ruse to gather information on the French.

"There you are, Stephen,' cried Jack. He had just caught up with Stephen on a mountainside to retrieve him for a conference with Mr. Fox (6:193).

Injured: Abdul, the Sultan's cup bearer and lover, by a rifle recoil, to the disappointment of no one except the Sultan (7:208).

Pregnant: Sultana Hafsa. The Sultan is hoping for a boy and heir and therefore makes a pilgrimage, delaying negotiations for a time (7:215).

"There you are, Stephen,' cried Jack, as he came in. 'A very good morning to you—it is days since we met. I am just going to flog those little brutes, and shall be back very soon. Here is His Excellency." (7:216).

Flogged: Midshipmen Reade and Harper, for drunkenness in a bawdy house ashore, by Jack (7:217).

"He greeted the Malays, a glum, wet, cross-looking pair, very unlike the Dyaks; they bowed and answered politely. But said there was no time to be lost." (8:232).

Affair: Edward Ledward and Andrew Wray are both found in bed with Abdul (8:235).

Dead: Lesueur, a clerk working for the French and Stephen's informant, killed by the French. He had been caught making transcripts and was forced to feed Stephen false information (8:235).

Witness: Andrew Wray offered to bear witness against Ledward in exchange for protection. Refused (8:236).

Killed: A Malay run amok, by a Dyak, with a spear. Two others injured (8:238).

Executed: Abdul. A sack of pepper is placed over his head and he is beaten with sticks (8:241).

Injured: Lt. Elliott, a falling bucket hit his already wounded shoulder. This is the first indication of an earlier injury (8:243).

Deserted: The Spanish shipbuilders who had been with the French team on the Cornélie (8:248).

Careened: The Cornélie herself, and very unlikely to sail for some time (8:248).

Subsidized: Pierrot Dumesnil, by Jack. He first refuses, but Jack reminds him how well he was treated when he and the Sophie were captured by Dumesnil's Uncle, Christy-Pallière. It is not certain that the two follow through on this offer (8:249).

"'Well, Stephen,' he said, 'there you are, back from your Godforsaken steps and all alive, I am happy to see..." on finding Stephen aboard Diane (8:249).

Dead: Andrew Wray and Edward Ledward, each by a single rifle bullet, brought to Van Buren's by Stephen, where they dissected both of them. This was cleared by the Sultan's Vizier, who required only that there be no recognizable remains. It is left unclear exactly who killed these two, though the implication is that Stephen arranged things. Also, much is made of Mr. Fox's marksmanship, the presence of several rifles, and the fact that he loathed the two traitors (8:252).

"Tell me, Aubrey, just when does the tide turn this afternoon? I wish there to be no time lost getting this document home: no time lost or dawdled away." Mr. Fox, wanting to get the treaty home as soon as possible (8:260).

Illness: Edward Fox, the envoy, considered by Stephen to be mentally ill and suffering from delusions of grandeur (9:280).

"They left their message in its bottle, they left their mark, and they sailed back to the ship, carrying a collection of plants and insects that would have been much larger if at last the Captain had not cried 'Come: we shall miss our tide. There is not a moment to lose." (9:283).

Illness: Loder, one of the diplomats, very embarrassed, with syphilis that he picked up at Prabang (9:283).

"There you are, Doctor. Should you like to go into the top and view the False Natunas again?" Jack is actually looking for a flag from Surprise, which would indicate she is in the area awaiting a rendezvous, but it is not there (9:285).

Aground: HMS Diane, on an uncharted reef at high tide, under Lt. Elliott's watch. He had been moving too fast for conditions and should have reefed his top sails (9:295).

Sick Bay Report: Falls, sprains, twists, a hernia, and Mr Blyth, a scalp wound caused by a flying hen coop (10:299).

Dead: Presumed lost in a typhoon. Lt. Elliott, Edward Fox, Johnstone, Crabbe, and Loder, and 3 Dianes, and perhaps some others. Fox insisted on leaving the grounded Diane for Batavia with his treaty just before the storm struck. Elliott was the officer in charge, who volunteered knowing it was his actions that had caused the grounding in the first place (10:306).

Dead and Injured: In the typhoon as the Diane's crew was attempting to get to shore: 17 hands lost in the cutter, four in the skiff, one struck by lightning, and six more injured. The dead were by drowning (10:316). One of the drowned was a midshipman (NC: 1:15).

Destroyed: HMS Diane, broken up in the typhoon, some pieces washed ashore (10:318).

Table 13-2: Crew of HMS Diane and HMS Nutmeg of Consolation

- 1. Early in The Thirteen Gun Salute the plan to aid South American Independence is discovered by the Spanish. This forces Jack to leave the crew of Surprise under Tom Pullings and sail in the Diane. Although a few of the usual gentlemen accompany him, the Diane is a relatively new and untried crew. After the Diane is destroyed, the crew make it back to Java where the Lieutenant Governor furnishes them with the 20 gun Nutmeg of Consolation to continue their cruise.
- 2. Although the ship is rated for six midshipmen, seven are listed: Bennett, Seymour, Harper, and Reade (TGS 5:134), Clerke (TGS 5:135), Greene (TGS 5:145), and Fleming (TGS 5:162).
- 3. Harper is dead: "Your clerk was killed in the charge; so was little Harper..." Stephen to Jack (NC 2:45). However: "It is no use to a one-armed cove, you know; but you shall treat Harper and me to a bowl of punch when we reach Botany Bay." Miller to William Reade on Nutmeg (5:111). Harper later incurs a splinter wound in the action with Cornélie (5:139).
- 4. He could be aboard Surprise. We learn his name as Nutmeg meets Surprise on the open sea and greetings are going back and forth.

Table 13-3: Met or mentioned elsewhere in The Thirteen Gun Salute

- 1. Lin Liang is listed as a banker. Liu is mentioned several times with this spelling. However, in context of the surroundings it appears Lin Liang and Liu Liang are meant to be the same person.
- 2. "Mona" is either named or referred to unnamed to several times in the canon. It is never revealed if "lost" means estranged or dead. Unnamed, 2:47; named in 4:89.
- 3. The Dixon affair does not make sense in context. We first meet Lt. Dixon as Captain of the Viper (LM) when he attempts to press some of the crew of Surprise as a Letter of Marque. Jack's exemption saves the crew. Jack calls his father in Mahon a "scrub." Here we meet him again, where Admiral Satterly says this refers to Admiral Harte, who changed his name when he inherited Bewley. In both Letter of Marque and here Jack speaks of the senior Dixon as if he were alive. But Admiral Harte died in the Pollux at the end of Treason's Harbour which must be several years ago.

However, Harte inherited from a man named Dilke. Babbington told Jack this in Ionian Mission, (5:151). If "Dixon" is the same as "Dilke" then this is the time when Harte would have changed his name. But he did not. He was still known as Admiral Harte up until the time he was killed at the end of Treason's Harbour (10:326).

4. Stamford Raffles is either Governor of Java (3:81 & 6:169, 172) or Lieutenant Governor of Java (4:103 & TL:1:8)).

14: The Nutmeg of Consolation

Injured: William Gorges, a pick axe through his foot, courtesy of Stephen Maturin as they were attempting to dig a well (1:12).

Illness: Stephen Maturin, of a fever causing vomiting, diarrhea, and delirium (1:22-24).

Action: The shipwrecked crew is visited by half a dozen Malays who arrived in a Proa, headed by a young woman named Kesegaran. The Malayans take a lively interest in the shipbuilding tools, silver, and other western goods as the crew hires her to sail to Batavia to obtain help. Instead, she returns with a much bigger vessel and about 300 men intent on overwhelming the Dianes, who only number 150. They burn the nearly-finished schooner the Dianes had been building from scraps of the wreck and proceed to attack the crew through several skirmishes (2:33+).

Dead: Mr. Hadley, the carpenter, Joe Gower, and one other, the first killed by the Malays. Jenning reported to Aubrey that Mr. White was slashed in the leg by Kesegaran, who then slit his throat. Gower then killed Kesegaran. One other Malay was killed. The three crew members were all beheaded (2:33).

Wounded: Crown, the Bosun, with a severed hamstring. There is some confusion here on who was killed. We know that THREE crew members were killed at this stage. Aubrey saw them being beheaded through his telescope. Yet Mr. White, the gunner, is standing next to Aubrey during Jenning's recitation and appears in speaking roles several times in the following pages. Since Jenning refers to "Mr. White," we know he is referring to an officer, not a crew member. Hadley, being a standing officer as ship's carpenter, would also have been referred to as "Mr. Hadley." This leaves us with a third crew member dead whom we cannot identify (2:33+).

"'Ah, Doctor, there you are. You have seen what is afoot, I dare say?" Stephen then suggests he could parlay with the pirates, a notion Jack rejects out of hand (2:34).

Action: The second skirmish takes place as the Malays attempt to storm the earthen works erected by the Dianes. They have also deployed a force in the trees intending to attack from behind and a third force out of sight below the hill intended to attack the crew as they pursue the fleeing first wave of Malays. Mr. Welby, the Marine Captain, has smoked the overall plan so that the Dianes are ready for the attack. The first carronade misfires and earns the scorn of the Malays, but the second, full of grapeshot, cuts a swath through the attacking party killing at least a score (2:36).

Wounded: Several of the crew in the fighting on the breastwork, unnamed. Also, two men are wounded by the Proa's swivel gun, which shoots one pound balls or rocks (2:37).

Dead: Mr. Blyth, the purser, of a heart attack when a swivel ball hit a nearby sandbag, scared to death (2:38).

Action: The third attack was precipitated by a diversionary action from the proa firing its swivel gun and many Malays shouting and running about as if to attack. The real attack was at the rear of the camp where the attackers had to climb a steep wall, which they did not know about. They were repulsed by Marines and Dianes hurling rocks at them. There were 29 counted Malays and all were killed or severely wounded. It is after this skirmish that the Malays burn the schooner. (2:40) The fourth attack was straight up the hill in no particular order. The Captain of the Malays was killed by an axe blow to the head, and the Dianes charged, led by ordered Marines. The remaining Malays headed for their proa to escape. Aubrey returns with the gun crews to fire on the proa. The carronades fire straight, but miss. Aubrey's nine-pounder, however, hits the proa amidships and it disintegrates (2:43).

Dead: The remaining Malays in the proa were drowned. This means all 300 Malays were either killed or severely wounded (2:43).

Dead: Harper and Elijah Butcher, the clerk. There is mention of several other dead who were beheaded, but with no names given. Also, there is mention of funerals as men dropped off, "One, two, and even three a day." (2:44-5). Originally there were 157 survivors (1:9). Later in Batavia, Maturin mentions there are about 130 of the Diane's crew left, indicating perhaps thirty were killed altogether (4:88).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey, a scalp wound. Mr. Reade, his arm hit by a swivel gun ball, had his arm amputated at the shoulder. Bennett was disemboweled, but lived through it. (2:45) Edwards was also wounded and saved by Stephen (2:46).

Injured: A Chinese boy injured his leg when he fell from a tree. Stephen bundles it up as if it were broken to ensure the crew's rescue by the boy's father, in a Chinese Junk. He carries on this subterfuge until the crew is safe in Batavia (2:50).

Rescued: The survivors of Diane, by Li Po and his junk, and taken to Batavia (3:55).

Shook Down: Wan Da and his war proa accost the Chinese Junk and charge it a $125 toll, plus three baskets of bird's nests (3:60).

Bribed: Stephen attempts to get Wan Da to prevent the French from getting any additional gunpowder. He gives him money, and also a nice rifle. From the conversation and the reaction it is doubtful this bribe has the desired effect (3:62).

Illness: David Edwards, the last remaining envoy, dysentery (3:64).

"Mr Fox thought it his duty to lose no time and he sailed for Batavia together with his suite in the stoutest of the ship's boats, carrying the treaty." Stephen explains the situation to Mr. Raffles, then goes on to present the copy. "It was of course Edward's office and privilege to bring it to you, but the poor man is prostrated with dysentery and he begged me to take it, with his duty and respectful compliments, in order that no time should be lost." (3:64).

Bankrupt: Smith & Clowes, the bank to which Stephen had directed his fortune be sent. Jack Aubrey also has "a few thousand" at the bank for convenience, but the majority of his money is at Hoare's (3:66).

"'There you are, Stephen,' cried Jack." who sees that Stephen is unkempt and knows he has been ashore talking to the governor (3:70).

Posted: To Nutmeg of Consolation, the Dutch Gelijkheid, which had been intentionally sunk for several months to rid it of pestilence. Jack and the entire crew of the destroyed Diane (3:72), which amounts to about 130 people (3:88). Jack immediately trades out the 20 nine pound cannon for the same number of thirty-two pound carronades (3:84).

Appointed: Jacob Sowerby, a botanist who considers Stephen Maturin a rival, to a government post with Stephen's recommendation. In thanks, Mr. Sowerby names a smelly plant after Stephen (3:86).

Promoted: Jenning, to Carpenter (3:88).

'There you are, Doctor,' he {Fielding} said. 'The captain desired me to let you know that he is in the cabin with a surprise......'There you are, Doctor,' cried Jack, 'and here is an old shipmate of ours.'" Mr. Adams, a shipmate in the old Lively, joins the crew (4:93).

Dead: 5 men from HMS Thunderer, of the Batavia fever. Killick's new mate, William Grimshaw, a man from Wapping, is the only survivor (4:100).

Sick Bay Report: Five with the Batavia Pox, and a sheet-anchor man with a broken collar bone (4:106).

Promoted: Conway, Oakes, and Miller to midshipmen. Oakes and Miller had been left on shore from their previous ship. Technically, they were deserters.

Jack rated them able when they first came on board, but their performance, as well as that of seaman Conway, earned their promotion (3:107).

Dead: Mr. Clerke, midshipman. This may have been the midshipman who drowned when the crew was escaping the Diane at the onset of the typhoon that broke her up. However, the passage also details the selling of his clothing before the mast, which would necessitate his sea chest having been saved from the Diane and hauled aboard the Chinese junk that took them to Batavia, which also seems unlikely (4:107). The other possibility for the drowned midshipman is Mr. Greene, introduced in TGS (5:145), but never heard from again.

Resurrected: Midshipman Harper, killed in the Malay attack, is back aboard (5:111).

"And if he had heard Captain Aubrey call out that there was not a moment to be lost once he had heard him a score of times." Said of Lieutenant Fielding after the Nutmeg had spoken with the Dutch merchantman Alkmaar (5:114).

"...there would be none of those splendid cruises he had promised himself when peace came back again—cruises in which no imperious voice should ever say 'There is not a moment to be lost'" Stephen Maturin, ruminating over his lost fortune (5:120).

"There you are, Stephen,' cried Captain Aubrey. 'Good morning to you. I thought you would be amazed." Jack is disguising Nutmeg as a merchantman (5:122).

Sick Bay Report: Two dental cases (5:116) plus two remaining poxes and one hernia. Also, Abse, dying of marthambles or "griping of the guts." (5:132).

Action: Cornélie (32) versus Nutmeg (20). Disguised as a merchantman, Nutmeg attempts to get close to the Cornélie. However, the French ship is not fooled and opens fire. Nutmeg races out of the harbor as fast as possible, leaving the French ship to weigh anchor, but they soon follow and engage in a running battle up the channel (5:136+).

Dead: Five from a single cannonball from the Cornélie: Two men on the forecastle, plus Mr. Miller, the newly promoted midshipman, a hand at the wheel named Gray, and Warren the quartermaster (5:136).

Sick Bay Report: splinter wounds, three of whom died from loss of blood (5:139), contusions, a broken forearm. Harper, carried down by Bonden with a splinter wound. One of the splinter wounds was Semple. Altogether Stephen reports six wounded in a good way (5:139).

Promoted: Mr. Seymour to 3rd Lieutenant, to take the watch place of Warren (6:141).

Dead: Abse, buried at sea against Stephen's will, who wanted to dissect him (6:149).

"There you are, Stephen. How happy I am to see you." The Cornélie has proven to be a "dull" sailer. However, it is probably the large amount of water she is taking on as a result of Nutmeg's carronade shots that makes her unusually slow (6:154).

Action: Cornélie versus Nutmeg, Round Two. Nutmeg is leading on the French ship by using a drag sail, but the French frigate snuck up on Nutmeg under veil of a squall, fired a full broadside, and crippled the Nutmeg by taking out the Maintopsail yard, and wedging a ball in the rudder mechanism. As Cornélie continues to fire broadsides Aubrey dives in with a crowbar and manages to work the ball loose. Nutmeg's maintopmast is much injured. Aubrey puts up a rare crossjack sail in an attempt to keep ahead of the Cornélie, which continues to chase. The two ships continue to exchange fire as they run down the channel. However, their firing also attracts the attention of Surprise, commanded by Tom Pullings, who has been awaiting a rendezvous with what he thinks is the Diane. Surprise is accompanied by a British privateer Triton (28) and two captured American prizes. Surprise easily passes Nutmeg in chase of the Cornélie. The two ships enter a squall, and by the time Nutmeg catches up the Cornélie, heavy with damage, has sunk and Surprise is recovering her surviving crew (6:157-66).

Injured: Jack Aubrey, by the "dumb-chalder," a part of the rudder, on Nutmeg, as he is attempting to loose the ball. Although it caused him to limp for weeks, we do not hear of this injury until Jack re-injures himself on Surprise in the next book (TL:4:99).

Wounded: Richardson, his leg, he guesses from the pendant hook when he was attempting to free the rudder (6:159).

Dead: Captain and 1st Lieutenant of Cornélie. Survived: Jean-Pierre Dumesnil, nephew of Captain Christy-Palliere, whom Jack Aubrey considers a friend (6:166).

Prizes: Several unnamed prizes for Surprise, plus the two American merchantmen. Fielding takes charge of Nutmeg and heads back to Batavia (7:170).

Transferred: Jack, Stephen, Bonden, Killick, Reade, and Oakes, and perhaps some others, transfer back to Surprise. The crew of the Diane sails on to Batavia. The Diane-Nutmeg commission thus ends here (7:170).

Rescued: Awkward Davis, who fell overboard, again, and was rescued by Mr. West (7:181).

Injured: Auden, two toes lost near Tierra del Fuego. Illness: John Brampton, who sinned with a woman and has a venereal disease. Both are Sethians (7:183).

Dead: Five hands lost on Surprise while under the command of Pullings. Three Lascans from pneumonia, one seaman washed out of the head, and one killed while boarding a merchantman (7:184).

Injured: Wilkins, a broken arm that was not healing. He had been drunk and fell from the mast (7:184). Scurvy is soon suspected aboard (7:192).

Injured: Mr. West, lost part of his nose to frostbite (7:188).

Injured: Mr. Martin, bitten by a Tapir. He was already famously bitten by an owlfaced night ape and a camel; and he lost one eye by getting too close to an owl (7:192).

Dead: the brother of Flood, eaten by South Sea Islanders, a reminisce (8:204).

Dead: The population of Sweeting's Island, of smallpox brought by a whaler (8:208).

Rescued: Sarah and Emily, young girls the only survivors on Sweeting's Island (8:212).

Injured: Sarah and Emily, both bitten by rats emboldened from eating Stephen's cocaine (8:225). A few pages later Sarah has swallowed a pin which requires Stephen's attention. They are given the last name of Sweeting (8:232).

Illness: Jack Aubrey, who gives himself an extra dose of Stephen's laxative and is out of sorts for several days, missing the first dinners in Australia (8:230).

Injured: Captain Lowe, of the Army, wounded in the right thigh and pierced in the shoulder by Stephen Maturin, then pinned to the ground and forced to give an apology for insulting Stephen and knocking off his wig (8:239).

Restored: Stephen's fortune. Because Stephen signed only his Christian name by mistake to the letter authorizing Sir Joseph Blaine to transfer funds, the transfer did not take place. Stephen's fortune remains secure at Hoare's. In a letter from Sir Joseph (9:247).

Injured: Mr. Martin, bitten by a cockatoo (9:250).

"There you are, Stephen." Jack is having trouble getting supplies for the ship because of obstructionist officials. Some, if not most of this has been caused by Stephen's fight with Lowe (9:258).

Orphans: Stephen places Emily and Sarah with an orphanage in Australia, much to their dismay (9:264). But they do not take well to their new surroundings and escape back to Surprise, where they climb high into the rigging, throw off their clothes, and refuse to come down (9:270).

Found: Padeen Colman, sentenced to transportation rather than death, is in New South Wales. Stephen finds him in the hospital recovering from a 200 lash flogging. "I knew you would come," said Padeen (9:278).

"'Why, there you are, Stephen. How glad I am to see you: we had not looked for you until tomorrow. I hope you had a pleasant trip?" Jack is still dealing with port officials and harassment of the ship's company (10:285).

Taken: By force, a convict who was hiding on Surprise (10:286).

Hanged: Robert Gough, the United Irishman on board the aborted chase that Surprise did not catch, subsequently caught and hanged. Stephen was seen aboard Surprise, and some of the Irishmen believe Stephen was responsible, when in fact he was not. As reported to him by his cousin, James Fitzgerald (10:290).

Dead: A convict who had run, found in the Outback with a spear through him (10:294).

Wounded: Sir William Hastings, a marine officer, who recounts that Stephen Maturin had saved his leg after Admiral Saumarez' action in the Gut (10:302).

Born: "Born at Ashgrove Cottage, near Portsmouth, the Lady of Dr. Maturin of the Navy, of a daughter" last April, as related by Sir Hastings, who saw the notice in the Navy Chronicle. The girl's name is Brigid (10:302).

Jailed: Awkward Davis, for beating up two sentries and throwing their muskets into the sea (10:304).

Injured: Stephen Maturin, bitten by a male platypus. He entered a coma and nearly died from the poison fang (10:313).

Rescued: Padeen Colman, after a series of maneuvers made possible by Stephen, much against Jack's wishes (10:315).

Table 14-2: Met or mentioned elsewhere in The Nutmeg of Consolation.

Notes:

1. For crew members of HMS Diane and HMS Nutmeg of Consolation, see Table 13-2. For crew members of Surprise, see Table 12-2. Aubrey originally sailed in Surprise as a Letter of Marque. Surprise was then hired by His Majesty's government to sail to South America to encourage rebellion against Spain. The Spanish authorities found out about the plot, which was denied. Aubrey was then reinstated into the Royal Navy and transferred to HMS Diane for Thirteen Gun Salute. The Diane was destroyed and Aubrey was given a second ship, Nutmeg of Consolation, temporarily. At the end of the book with the same name Aubrey transfers back to Surprise, and thus to the original commission. The crew of Diane populates the Nutmeg and is still with her when she sails back to Java. The crew of the Surprise remains the same throughout this period.

15: The Truelove (Clarissa Oakes in the UK)

Affair: thwarted. Selina Wesley makes "game" of Jack Aubrey, walking him down the garden path, literally, only to find her servant at the end, so Jack walks back alone (1:13).

Illness: Jack Aubrey is "hipped" and "out of sorts" and is bled by Stephen Maturin to restore his humours (1:16). Later on Stephen gives him a dose of laudanum (1:34 & 2:36).

Illness: Owen and Philips are both absent from Divisions because of pox (1:21).

Rescued: Clarissa Harvill, by midshipman Billy Oakes. She had been sentenced to Transportation and was a prisoner in Australia. Oakes hides her in midshipman's clothing among the cables and is discovered by Aubrey and Pullings when Pullings kicks a rat in her direction (1:29).

Operation: Two patients given a supra-pubic cystotomy by Stephen. This would indicate bladder stones (2:38).

"we will make all possible sail on our former course, There is not a moment to be lost." Jack to Captain Pullings. They are being chased by another vessel, and Jack is afraid the presence of Padeen and/or Clarissa is known (2:43). Just moments later he says, "Tell Jemmy what is to be done and ask him whether there are any better tailors in the ship, and if so to carry on with their help: There is not a moment to lose." Jack figures if he can get Clarissa Harvill and Billy Oakes married, this will exempt her from being a prisoner (2:47).

Married: Clarissa Harvill and Billy Oakes, at Jack's insistence. Aubrey says he intends to maroon Both Oakes and Clarissa at his first opportunity, but this turns out to be show. Bonden goes ashore and reports back that there is no landing space, but this is not true (2:52).

Orders: Caught by the faster cutter Eclair, Jack receives new orders to take on an American/French privateer harassing English whalers at Moahu. Padeen and Clarissa are safe (2:55).

"Captain Aubrey would proceed to Moahu without a moment's loss of time and take appropriate measures to seek the release of the ships and their crews." In the orders sent from New South Wales (2:59).

Action: One of many accounts of Surprise versus Hermione when Capt. Hamilton cut her out of a Spanish port, though perhaps the most detailed in the way of casualties. The Spanish lost 119 dead, 97 wounded out of 365. 12 seamen from Surprise were wounded (2:63).

Problem: Letters from home state that something is amiss with Diana, and most particularly, Brigid, who is described as "a little strange" (3:66).

Inherited: Cousin Edward has died. Jack Aubrey, inherits his estate (3:67).

Dead: Mr. Withers, Jack Aubrey's family attorney (3:68).

Pregnancy: Feared, Clarissa Oakes, but not true (3:74).

Illness: The Bosun, Mr. Bulkeley, has a venereal disease (3:76).

Dead: All the sheep aboard Surprise, of an unknown disease (3:77).

Promoted: Mr. Oakes, midshipman, now holds the "Master's Mate" designation (3:85).

Pierced: Surprise, by a swordfish, just abaft Willful Murder (a cannon). No permanent damage, but good eating (4:89).

Disappeared: Mr. Martin's cat. Clarissa Oakes suggests she did not throw the cat overboard, which makes her an instant suspect (4:96).

Injured: Jack Aubrey, caught his ankle on a lynch-pin in the same place where he had injured it before on the Nutmeg (4:99).

Injured: Mr. Martin, who "fell out of the top" (4:100).

Injured: Mr. Davidge, by falling down the companion ladder he hit his head and has a bruise from his left temple to his cheek bone (4:100). However, both Jack Aubrey and Stephen are suspicious that either Mr. West or Mr. Oakes hit Davidge in a jealous brawl, whose subject was Clarissa Oakes (4:116).

Affair: Several of the officers have taken advantage of Mrs. Oakes "good will." Davidge and West are definite. Pullings may also have participated, though this is not certain. Mr. Martin destroyed his viola in order not to teach her as a way of staying away from temptation. Reade, though infatuated and too young, knows about the goings on. He becomes quite drunk and raves on in a delirium about his love for Clarissa Oakes and her cabin being a bawdy house with so many going in and out (3:111+).

"Why, there you are, Stephen. A pot of coffee will be up in a moment..." (4:112).

Injured: Stephen Maturin, who did a complete somersault as the Surprise gave a lurch, and hit his head. His wig kept him from serious injury (4:112).

Sick Bay Report: Sprains, cracked ribs, broken bones, burns, and a hernia, the usual after heavy weather (5:121).

Injured: Mr. Reade, Fell on his own marlinspike after being hit by a falling block. A splinter from his rib pushed against a nerve causing great pain (5:122).

Injured: Clarissa Oakes, a bruise about the eye in a fall during a storm, but widely believed to have been inflicted by Mr. Oakes (5:130).

Dead: The carpenter and mate of the Daisy, a British whaler, by the Franklin, an American privateer with a French crew (5:139).

"The next day, after trading again in the morning, we must get underway at the beginning of the ebb. There is not a moment to be lost." Jack assembles the crew to tell them their mission. (5:144) Minutes later he is talking to Captain Wainwright of the Daisy on the best way to approach the chief of the island so they might get fresh water. 'There must be no misunderstanding, no disagreement, no time lost.' (5:149).

Fingered: Clarissa Oakes inadvertently gives away the highly placed French spy Stephen has been looking for, nicknamed "Pillywinks." He is a Duke with the Order of the Garter, well known at court, a man who limps and has curious ways, known to have "partied" with Edward Ledward and Andrew Wray (6:168).

"You must not keep Mr Martin waiting: there is not a moment to be lost." Stephen to Sara and Emily, who have dressed in new frocks for All Hands (7:170).

Dead: Mr. Caley, his head blown off with a double-barreled gun by Clarissa Oakes, which caused her to be sentenced first to death, but commutated to Transportation to Australia because of the influence of Harry Essex, a member of Black's, the club of which both Stephen and Jack belong (7:172).

Injured: Bonden, who boxed with an islander and had his nose knocked sideways, and Awkward Davies, wrenched and twisted in a wrestling match, and Emily Sweeting, ill after someone told her how Kava was made (7:174).

Injured: Dr. Falconer, who twisted his ankle severely in a walk with Mr. Martin (7:178).

"'Why, Stephen, there you are!' cried Jack, who is actually very angry because of the poor performance of the crew weighing anchor in front of Captain Wainwright, of the whaler Daisy, who averted his eyes (7:179).

Flogged: Weightman, the butcher, 12 lashes. Six others, including James Mason, Bosun's Mate, received six lashes apiece. This all came out of the Surprise's humiliation in a botched maneuver on weighing anchor. The men were flogged for insubordination, but the root cause was the ill feeling between the ship's officers vying for the attention of Clarissa Oakes (8:198).

Dead: French Cockswain of Truelove's cutter, murdered by drowning by the English crew. This man had murdered William Hardy, the Truelove's Captain (9:227).

Dead: Davidge and Harry Weaver, both killed in a skirmish with the French on Moahu at Pabay. Also, there were no French survivors, therefore about twenty French were killed (9:229).

Wounded: in the skirmish: William Brymer, George Young, and Bob Stewart with a leg wound (9:229). We also learn that many Trueloves are in a bad way (9:230, 232). However, in the next book, in a letter to the Admiralty, Jack writes of only one dead and two wounded during this skirmish (WDS: 1:15).

Dead: The mate of the Truelove, killed by the French while he was spiking the guns (9:230).

Prize: The Truelove becomes a prize of Surprise (9:230).

"There is not a moment to be lost. Kalahua means to attack on Friday in the morning, whether he can get his gun there in time or not: his god says he cannot fail." Jack to Stephen on the importance of getting to the other side of the island (9:231).

Dead: Clarissa Oakes is afraid to return to England not only because her sentence is not up for transportation, but also because of capital crimes she may have committed in New South Wales. Her example is a baby thrown into a well (9:235).

Action: Jack meets Queen Puolani and convinces her to accept King George's protection against the northern island chief, Kalahua. Under cover of darkness the crew transports several carronades to a narrow valley above the village, a traditional battleground between the two sides. They lure the French and native army into the cleft and cut them apart with canister shot (9:247-9).

"If I may speak to your warchiefs, we may start getting some of our guns ashore and making our preparations. There is not a moment to be lost." Jack to Queen Puolani just before the action (9:242).

Dead: All the northerners on Moahu who had crept south with the French in an attempt to attack Puolani. The dead include Kalahua, 37 French and possibly American, and all the natives. There were no survivors (9:249).

Promoted: Billy Oakes to Acting Lieutenant and Prizemaster of the Truelove. He and Clarissa are to take the whaler back to Batavia to be condemned, then proceed to England. Slade and Gorges from Surprise are said to go, along with the three French prisoners (9:245).

Affair of Heart: After the victory banquet Jack Aubrey went off to sleep before pursuing the Franklin. Puolani crept into Jack's abode and spent the night (9:254).

Table 15-2: Met or mentioned elsewhere in The Truelove.

Notes:

1. For crew members of Surprise, see Table 12-2.

16: The Wine-Dark Sea

Overboard: Mr. Reade. Midshipman, Rescued by Jack Aubrey (1:5).

Injuries and Illnesses: The usual, plus one man who had fallen on the pointed end of a piece of bamboo and pierced his thorax (1:9-10).

Promoted: Grainger, forecastleman, to 3rd mate. And Sam Norton, seaman, promoted to midshipman. It was stated several times that there were no midshipmen aboard a privateer, but both Oakes and Reade are mids, and Norton was promoted to fill Oake's spot (1:9).

Injured: Mr. Grainger, suffered one broken clavicle and two calentures (fevers), this over time, related here by Stephen (1:12).

Action: Surprise is in pursuit of the Franklin. They exchange fire for a couple of days. It is nighttime and the crew mistakenly believes they are being shelled from mortars, this incongruous in the middle of the Pacific, a fact the crew soon realizes. In fact, both ships have wandered near a volcano emerging from the ocean. Debris from the eruption causes many injuries from falling, burning material. The ship loses its foretopmast and its main topmast in the bombardment. By the end of this "action" both ships have been dismasted almost entirely, with the Franklin, which was closer, suffering most (1:20+).

Born: A new island by volcanic action (1:24).

Injured: Mr. West, a severe depressed fracture of the skull as well as a laceration. Another man, compound fracture of the left arm and a series of deep gashes. A third requires an amputation. Wilcox, several fingers amputated. Veale has something wrong with an eye (1:22-3).

Dead: Sea creatures of many species by the thousand, including at least one whale, all due to the volcanic action (2:24).

"No, sir. The young gentleman with one arm told me there was not a moment to be lost, so I abandoned all my personal property." Jean Dutourd to Jack Aubrey, on being captured (2:33).

Dead: Many aboard the Franklin, both from the volcano and the Surprise's guns. The Sailing master, William B. Chauncy, his mate, and most of the crew of a gun have been killed by a ball from Surprise. Many men have been thrown overboard (2:31). "Both officers" killed aboard Franklin (2:34).

Injured: Mr. Jean Dutourd, owner of the Franklin, a scalp wound (2:31).

Injured: Many gunshot wounds, splinters, injuries from a bursting gun, plus volcanic wounds aboard Franklin. One amputation at the hip (2:31).

Prize: The Franklin, which has no letter of marque nor a commission, making It technically a pirate ship. Pullings takes temporary command and refits her with carronades from Surprise's ballast (2:33).

Dead: Mr. West, probably during surgery when Stephen Maturin attempted a trephine on his skull. He was buried at sea (2:38).

Injured: Mr. Bentley, carpenter, his foot hit by a falling top-maul (3:53).

"there was not indeed going to be loss of a single minute, and the carpenter heaved himself up the side, limping to his place by the new mainmast's heel." Mr. Bentley is actually afraid his substitute might get credit for the new mast (3:54).

Dead: Last of Franklin's dead are thrown over the side. We do not know the number, but they had initially survived and were dying at the rate of two or three a day (3:54).

"There you are, Doctor, cried the Captain as Stephen came on deck..." Jack wants Stephen to witness the transformation of the Franklin from a wreck to a seaworthy vessel. Jack wants him to see "the marble," according to Sarah (3:58).

Promoted: Wilkins, seaman, to 3rd Lieutenant contemplated (4:66) and obviously done by (5:107). Note: "Lieutenant" implies a King's commission, whereas "Mate" as in "1st Mate" is the equivalent position in a private ship. Due to the awkward status of Surprise, these terms are often used interchangeably in the text.

Injured: Captain Pullings, a dislocated jaw, as a result of yelling, actually a result of an old injury inflicted by the Mustapha Bey's Torqud (4:70).

Illness: Grant and Sawney MacDuff, two of the more persistent poxes of several (4:75+).

Illness: Rev Mr. Martin has severe sores from his clothes, which have been washed in salt water. He believes himself to have "the pox" as a result of his liaison with Mrs. Oakes, so he doses himself with mercury (4:75+).

"let me have that wicked old shirt and put this one on, straight from the smoothing-iron. There is not a moment to be lost." Killick to Mr. Reade, hurrying him to dinner (4:78).

Smoked: Stephen Maturin, by Dutourd. Stephen was showing off some newly learned French seaman's terms and Dutourd remembered meeting him in France. Stephen's mission to Peru is now in jeopardy (4:80).

Wounded: Mr. Vidal, by a spiteful decapod which had attached itself to a piece of salt beef being dragged overboard (4:85).

Illness: Douglas Murd, rubbed with blue ointment, probably a pox (5:97).

Action: Surprise first finds a barrel identified as being from an American whaler. Franklin and Surprise begin to sweep for her and find her with several catches and all the boats out. The Franklin is wearing American colors, so the whaler attempts to get to the Franklin for protection, getting underway and abandoning a couple of its own boats. Pullings sends up his own colors and the whaler is captured (5:97-100).

Dead: Master of the captured whaler, harpooned by his crew for abandoning them as Surprise attempted capture. His heart split and spinal cord severed (5:100).

Illness: Smyth, who drank a liniment instead of rubbing it on (5:103).

Prize: The whaler. Prizemaster is Mr. Vidal. Jack directs him to take the prize to Callao (5:103).

"As for getting the water across, you have half an hour: there is not a moment to lose." Jack to Vidal. Franklin had dumped her water over the side in an attempt to lighten load, increase speed, and avoid capture (5:104).

Illness: Mr. Martin, now very sick from overdosing himself on mercury. He is given opium by Stephen (5:109+).

Action: Surprise hears of a pirate ship flying a black flag, the Alastor, from Edward Shelton, a British seaman who was aboard the whaler during peacetime and who is now a volunteer on Surprise. The Alastor is set to attack a British merchantman known to be setting out soon from Callao. Tom Pullings, in Franklin, finds her first and grapples alongside. Surprise comes up the other side where Jack leads a boarding party (5:117-119).

Prize: The Alastor, taken to be sold at Callao (5:119).

Injury: John: a hernia, helps secure Mr. Martin, who has gone into a delirium upon the firing of Surprise's guns (5:117).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey. A pistol shot grazes his skull. The wad from the load hits one eye. In addition, he is stabbed in the leg with a pike (5:118).

Dead and Wounded: Many, including the pikeman who wounded Jack, who is beaten to death by Awkward Davies (5:119).

Freed: 15 slaves aboard the pirate ship are rescued. Sam Panda makes provision for them as free men (6:120).

Transferred: Jack Aubrey takes over the Franklin while the Surprise is in the Callao shipyard. There are many temporary transfers of crew members between the captured ships during this period (6:121).

Buried: "Our people," by Rev Mr. Martin. We're not told who or how many. Also, there were only "a few" Alastor survivors, and three of these died later on (6:123).

Wounded: Barret Bonden, a cutlass slash (6:123), Mr. Grainger, wounded by a musket shot (6:124), and the Bosun, Mr. Bulkeley, who had fallen while drunk onto several weapons and was cut by them (6:124).

Sick Bay Report: Wounded, incised, lacerated, punctures, gun shot wounds, simple, comminuted, and compound fractures (6:127).

Dead: Grant, who had been given the Vienna treatment for pox (6:128).

"...I cannot wait to get you ashore and to start more radical measures; for indeed, colleague, there is not a moment to lose." Stephen to Mr. Martin, trying to get him to drink copious amounts of water to purge his system of the mercury he has digested. Also: "There was not a moment to be lost, and happily the harbour formalities in Callao Bay did not take long..." (6:128).

Sent Home: Mr. Martin, in The Three Graces, by Stephen. Mr. Martin admitted to self-dosing, which caused him to be sick just from that. He was also constantly dizzy and could not keep his balance, exacerbated by being one-eyed. Maturin decided Mr. Martin would no longer do well at sea and sent him off (6:133).

Dead: The Franklin's surgeon and surgeon's mate were among the dead in the encounter with Franklin, according to Fabian, an apothecary's assistant in New Orleans, who had been recruited as a substitute (6:136).

Dead: General Mendoza. His horse threw him (7:147).

Promoted: To acting 1st Lieutenant: Vidal. Afterguard is under Slade (7:154). Apparently Slade did not leave for England with Clarissa and Billy Oakes as Jack had earlier suggested. (TL 9:245).

Prize: Jack sent in an American fur trader captured by Franklin (7:154).

Escaped: Dutourd, helped by several of the Knipperdolling crew impressed with his talk of equality and democracy. Mr. Vidal had likely allowed him to escape in the launch when Jack sent him in to retrieve more of Surprise's crew to man the Franklin (7:156).

Action: Jack understands Stephen may now be in danger, so he leaves the Franklin with Mr. Vidal and sets sail for Callao in Alastor's launch with Bonden, Killick, Plaice, Johnson, and Vidal's nephew, Ben Vidal, as insurance, since Jack has figured out Vidal was probably responsible for Dutourd's escape. However, the launch encounters bad weather, thus making Jack absent from the scene for some time (7:157).

Suspected: Stephen Maturin. Jack is now convinced Stephen is responsible for the deaths of Ledward and Wray (7:160).

Denounced: Dutourd has indeed made it to shore and has denounced Stephen as a British spy and Surprise as a British ship, not a privateer. Though neither the French delegation nor the Peruvians believe him, this spooks the coup attempt when a government functionary uses the incident to his advantage. Stephen is forced to walk over the Andes to Chile to escape imprisonment (8:179-186).

Injured: Stephen Maturin, knocked on his face by a "tame" guanaco, then spat in the face by a Llama (8:182).

Rescued: The Alastor launch, just as it is entering Callao harbor. The crew has been without water and food for several days (9:190).

Dead: One guanaco (not the same one), which then fell off a 200 foot cliff, this depriving the party of a change in diet from guinea pig (9:203).

Dead: One Llama, frozen to death. Also, Stephen's leg and foot are frostbitten (9:217).

Rescued: Stephen Maturin, from a balsa shell off the coast of Chile, complete with many specimens, and a story of three American merchantmen about to come around the horn, ripe for the taking (10:222).

"...but the chief cost of my haste was that I have some information that you might wish to act upon without the loss of a minute." Stephen explaining to Jack about the three American ships (10:222).

Lost: To Stephen Maturin, a couple of unimportant toes, to frostbite in the Andes, via a chisel to prevent the spread of gangrene (10:224).

Dead: John Proby, two days out of Callao, of illness. One of his hands has been preserved for study (10:228).

Fired: Jack put off Mr. Vidal and two of his cousins at Callao for their role in rescuing Mr. Dutourd, and also the Bosun, Mr. Bulkeley, for his continuing thievery of stores (10:228).

Promoted: William Sadler, from seaman to the gunroom, probably as a Lieutenant/mate (10:228).

Dead: 3 hands aboard the Diligent struck by lightning on a Thursday, their bodies still warm on Sunday, a reminisce by William Sadler (10:230).

Dead and Wounded: Seven dead and thirteen burned aboard Repulse in the year 1810, a reminisce by Tom Pullings (10:230).

Injured: Several bruises and bones from hands falling on the frozen rigging or slipping on the icy deck (10:234).

Action: Surprise encounters three "China ships" from America and prepares to attack only to discover they are escorted by a brig plus a large American frigate of 38 guns. In the resulting battle Surprise manages to stop the brig early on and make her lose a yard. Also, a nine pound shot from a chaser pierced her below the water line. Surprise had its mizzen shot through as it barely missed an iceberg. Eventually the American finds herself at a dead end of an ice channel and has to tow herself out, therefore Surprise escapes (10:250).

Wounded: two splinter wounds, one of them Joe Plaice. One man hit with a falling block and in a coma. One foot amputated as a result of crushed toes and ligaments from a gun recoil (10:247).

Lost: The main mast, shattered by lightning. Also, the rudder fell away (10:252).

Dead & Injured: Three men by lightning, one mad dead, Isaac Rame, a Knickerdolling. He was considered unlucky by the crew, because his mates were the ones who had ferried Dutourd to shore, which put Stephen in jeopardy (10:252).

Rescued: The Surprise, by Heneage Dundas in the Berenice (10:259).

Dead: We learn that Mr. Oakes, who had made Lieutenant, has been killed in action (10:260).

Table 16-2: Met or mentioned elsewhere in The Wine Dark Sea

Notes:

- 1. For crew members of Surprise, see table 12-2.
- 2. Edward Norton was actually a friend of Jack's grandfather, not a blood cousin, though Jack called him "cousin" from childhood. He gave Jack a seat in Parliament, but this is the first indication that he, himself, was also a member. It is theoretically possible this is another cousin, not Edward Norton.
- 3. Stephen says he does not have van Swieten's book on venereal diseases. In TL 4:100 he mentions this book specifically. Perhaps it fell overboard.
- 4. It's possible "Tepec" and "Tupec" are meant to be the same person

17: The Commodore

Dead: Surgeon and Surgeon's Mate of the Berenice, lost overboard (1:2).

Illness: Unnamed ill with Sydney Pox and Cape Horn Scurvy aboard Berenice (1:2).

Won: Ringle, a Baltimore schooner which had been found abandoned on the open ocean, by Jack from Dundas in a backgammon match (1:4).

Wounded: Jack Aubrey, on the forearm by a slash from Heneage Dundas in a duel, when they were midshipmen aboard Bellerophon (1:4).

Bailed: Heneage Dundas by Jack, who loaned him 1,000 gold guineas to pay off a paternity suit (1:7).

"Alone in the great cabin Stephen reflected upon Sir Joseph's message. It required him to proceed to London without the loss of a minute, and it did so even more briefly than usual." Stephen is to attend an Intelligence Committee meeting at which he must explain the failure of the mission to Peru (1:20).

"He had scarcely left to see to his own before Jack came swarming aboard again by the stern ladder. 'There you are, Stephen,' he cried." The Ringle is to take Stephen to London (1:20).

Wounded: Williams and Ellis, with broken limbs (1:11), the result of battling each other with loggerheads while drunk (1:13).

Wounded: A forecastleman aboard George, his leg amputated. He had called Ellis' father a "nymph," which resulted in a loggerhead battle. A reminisce by his son (1:13).

Dead: John Somers, off the Horn, as told to his grandfather by his younger brother on Surprise (1:25).

Dead: Somers' mother has been dead a year by the time the Surprise returns (1:26).

Dead: Executed by hanging, eight people at once, Jack Singleton and his mates, one a child, outside Shelmerston (1:26).

Injured: Jack Aubrey, hit his head on a rock when Abhorson, a horse owned by Mr. Briggs, threw him, near Ashgrove Cottage (1:29).

Action: Stephen explains to the Intelligence Committee the failure of the mission to Peru, precipitated by Jean Dutourd's untimely accusation that Stephen is an agent. The Committee is most happy that the fortune to be used for bribing officials is largely intact and can be used for some other purpose. Strangely, Stephen insists that the actions against the French at Moahu and Dutourd's Franklin took place in the Nutmeg of Consolation. In fact, they took place on Surprise. (2:32-33). Later on when Stephen meets with Clarissa their mutual reminisces are similar, remembering the Nutmeg, which Clarissa never saw. The Nutmeg was returned to Batavia by Lt. Fielding when Aubrey took over Surprise and sailed to New South Wales where Midshipman Oakes met and "freed" Clarissa (2:51-53).

Smoked: The Duke of Habachtsthal is identified as the senior official who had been protecting Edward Ledward and Andrew Wray. Unfortunately, he is in a very secure position as a semi-royal and ruler of a small kingdom in Prussia. The Admiralty threatened him, but he is martialling his forces to retaliate (2:39).

Illness: Charlotte, Fanny, and George, measles (2:43).

Affair: Alleged. Mrs. Williams talks to Jack and accuses Diana of having an affair with Colonel Hoskins, drinking heavily, and carrying on with her groom, Mr. Wilson (2:43).

Won: By Diana, thousand of pounds in a thirty-five to one bet on horses. Diana had been acting as a bookie for small trades. She then gave or sold the business to Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Morris, who are again solvent (2:44-45).

Promoted: Jack Aubrey, to Commodore 1st Class, with Bellona (74) as a flagship (a temporary command). Bellona is 1615 tons, built in 1760, with a complement of 590 (2:47).

Promoted: Tom Pullings, to Post Captain of the Bellona by Jack Aubrey as Commodore (2:48).

Illness: Brigid Maturin, Stephen's daughter, seen to be autistic (3+).

Trouble: Someone has been asking after Diana, and especially Mrs. Oakes. The Duke's men are closing in (3:59-60).

Wounded: Frederick Briggs, the servant of Mrs. Morris, close friend to Mrs. Williams, is beaten by the hands (but not seriously) for being an informer (3:66).

Threatened: Mrs. Williams, by Stephen, when Mrs. Williams announces her intention to knock some sense into Brigid. Stephen threatens not only prosecution but also exposure of the betting operation. Shortly thereafter Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Morris leave Woolcombe for Bath (3:68-69).

Stiffed: George, Fanny, and Charlotte had been promised fourpence apiece by Mrs. Williams if they brought her Dr. Maturin. The debt was never paid (3:69).

Dead: Bellona's previous surgeon, of an alcoholic coma (3:85).

"Now hurry along, do. There is not a moment to lose." Sophia to Killick. She has just broken up a fight between Killick and Mnason, the Butler, and is urging him to prepare for a dinner engagement (4:90).

"There is not a moment to lose," said the Admiral, shaking him by the hand." Jack has just failed in getting the Admiral to remove Captain Thomas from the squadron. (4:96) Later on Jack refuses to tell Stephen the precise sailing date, saying, "All I can say is that there is not a moment to be lost. You must attend to your medical stores directly, and may the Lord have mercy on your soul." (4:97).

"The bank will need some little time to get everything ready; and, you know, there is not a moment to lose." Sir Joseph Blaine to Stephen, who is to take Clarissa Oakes, Padeen Colman, Brigid, and his fortune in gold to Spain to escape possible prosecution in England. (4:106). Repeated next page, "and as Sir Joseph had said, with his pale smile, there was not indeed a moment to lose." (5:107).

"'There you are, Stephen,' cried Jack, looking up from his desk." Stephen is there to ask Jack for the Ringle to take him to Spain (5:113).

"We shall not,' said Stephen. 'Even as things are, the tide will be half out. There is not a moment to be lost." Stephen to Clarissa as they head for the Ringle, bypassing Ashgrove Cottage (5:136).

Affair: Sophia is not fond of Clarissa and believes Jack had an affair with her. The "proof" is red silk. Jack had given Clarissa some for her wedding dress, the same silk that Sophia had also made into a dress. They had a dinner party, and both wore red. There was no affair, however. Jack is innocent—this time (5:136).

Escaped: Clarissa Oakes, Padeen Colman, Brigid, in the Ringle, sail to Avila, Spain, where they will live for a time until Stephen can arrange their pardons (5:134+).

Action: With Stephen's fortune aboard Ringle encounters the Marie-Paule, a French privateer, which chases the much smaller Ringle, which is in a bad position near a headland. Stephen fears all is lost, but the extremely confident and unfazed Reade steers the Ringle within a biscuit toss of the headland (which Slade does, indeed, hit with a biscuit) and escapes into open sea where Ringle is much faster than any frigate (5:142-144).

Safe: Stephen's treasure, in the bank of the Holy Ghost. Clarissa, et al, with Stephen's Aunt Petronilla at a convent (5:144).

Cured: of autism, nearly, Brigid. Padeen's patience taught Brigid Irish at first. She now speaks credible English and is no longer withdrawn. She is a natural sailor who never gets seasick (5:144).

Wounded: Caley, a part of his ear ripped off in a fight, sewn back on by Stephen (6:149).

Dead: Mr. Gray, 1st Lt. Of Bellona, operated on by Stephen for stones, catches an infection and dies (6:150 and 7:165).

"There is not a moment to lose, because half the meaning of the scribbles on the slate is still in my head and the other half in Mr. Adams'." Tom Pullings to Stephen. They have just had a great gun exercise where the rate if fire is all-important (6:150).

Wounded: Ned Hart, lost a foot while on Worcester (6:158).

Engaged: Reverend Mr. Hinksey and Lucy Smith, much to the relief of Jack, who had grown quite jealous of Hinksey's frequent visitations to Ashgrove and the impertinence of the Reverend sitting in Jack's favorite chair (6:162).

Orders: Jack's squadron is ordered to put down the slave trade off the coast of Africa (7:169).

Rescued: Ship's Boy and a valuable harpoon on Aurora, by the ship's boat. He speared a tuna, then fell in after it (7:173).

Published: John Paulton's novel, dedicated to Stephen Maturin. Paulton was the author who helped Stephen free Padeen from New South Wales (7:180).

"There is not a moment to be lost,' he observed, having heaved out the signal for the Thames to make more sail." Jack is worried about many aspects of the squadron's performance (7:181).

Promoted: Whewell to Acting Lieutenant (7:183) and William Harding, promoted to 1st Lieutenant after the death of Grant (7:188).

"Why, Stephen, there you are,' cried Jack. 'I have not seen you this age. How do you do?" Jack realizes that the publicity in the London papers on his mission can put it in jeopardy, but Stephen suggests this might be a diversionary tactic, since they are really after a French squadron heading for Ireland (7:185).

Sick Bay Report: Sprains, crushed toes, hernias, and powder burns as a result of a gun exercise (7:185 and again 8:206).

"There you are, Doctor,' cried Jack, very loud. 'Good morning to you. I hope you slept?" Bellona has just caught the Nancy, a supposedly Spanish slaver. Stephen quickly determines that the master can't even speak Spanish and that he is English (7:189).

"...You will go aboard the Ringle as soon as possible and proceed to Sierra Leone without the loss of a minute. Take Mr. Reade with you: he handles her beautifully." Jack to Mr. Whewell (7:193).

Sunk: Nancy, by the squadron, which took turns firing on her as she was moored in front of Freetown, as an example and a show of force (8:196).

Wounded: Whewell, acting Lt., slashed in the arm while boarding a slaver (8:198). Several other flesh wounds unnamed (8:199).

"We must take every possible advantage before the whole coast is warned. There is not a moment to lose..." Jack to Stephen. The squadron can catch more slavers if they move fast before the word spreads (8:208).

Injured: Abel Black, a cracked fibula from stumbling over a bucket (8:211).

"...But you would have to be here on shore and ready to put off without the loss of a minute at high tide on Wednesday." Stephen is allowed a few hours to botanize (8:221).

Illness: Several hands are afflicted with malaria (9:223).

Illness: Stephen Maturin, Yellow fever. He survives but is very weak for several days (9:225+).

"There you are, Stephen,' cried Jack, while Tom Pullings leapt to his feet and set him in a chair." Stephen is very weak after recovering from the fever (9:227).

Injured: Dick Roe, beaten by Barret Bonden, probably for criticizing Stephen Maturin. Maturin had forbidden shore leave for the hands for fear the hands would contract yellow fever. It is ironic, then, that he goes ashore and gets the very same, an issue the more discrete hands keep to themselves (9:229).

Prizes: 18 slavers have been captured. Most of them fired on the squadron, which constitutes piracy (10:231).

Rescued: A total of 6,120 slaves as a result of the fleet's actions off the coast of Africa. This also results in nearly £350,000 in prize money for the squadron (9:232).

Dead: "Many young men sent in" by Jack Aubrey. The larger ships stayed off shore out of sight where the real work in capturing slavers was done by the smaller vessels. We do not get names or a more precise accounting for the number dead and wounded (9:232).

Saved: A Potto from boiling, by Mr. Whewell, who consigned the creature to Stephen's care. The hands believe the potto brings luck to the ship (9:238).

Illness: Fevers from men in the inshore vessels including tertians, double tertians, remittents, and quartans, as well as three case of yellow fever, including Barker and Overly (9:242).

Dead: The third case of yellow fever, unnamed (9:243).

Dead: 2nd Lieutenant of the Thames and a Mr. Willoughby, a marine officer aboard Stately, in a duel. They shot each other in the stomach, then both later died of their wounds (9:244).

"he consistently urged his maxim 'Lose not a minute: there is not a minute to be lost', and obeyed it himself even to the point of forbidding the ships he visited to reduce sail to let him come aboard more easily." The squadron must get up to Ireland as soon as possible to intercept the French (9:246).

Exchanged: Stephen met Christine Wood, a fellow naturalist. He left his Potto with her, not caring to take the animal out of the tropics. She promises to send him the bones after the potto dies (10:256).

Illness: Several cases of "an intractable rash" (9:254).

Court Martial: Admiral Sir Robert Calder with fifteen ships met a French fleet of twenty and took only two ships. He was censured for misjudgment (10:262).

Dead: Michael Tierney, at the Bight of Benin, the last Irish pilot on board (10:274).

Action: Commodore Aubrey's squadron encounters French Commodore Maistral's invading fleet off the coast of Ireland, composed of two 74's, four transport vessels, and several frigates. The plan is for Aubrey's Bellona to attack one French 74 while Stately and Thames attack the other. The smaller ships Aurora, Camille, and Laurel were to keep watch on the transports while the larger ones were taken out. Thames manages to get afoul a reef and the shore and does not take part in the battle. Bellona drives one French 74 onto a rock shelf by an Irish village. The Stately misses stays and is pounded by the other French 74, which runs at the sight of Bellona. As it turns out, two more British 74's and a frigate have happened upon the battle, the Royal Oak and the Warwick. Aubrey tells them about the transports and essentially gives them the prizes to take, since Bellona is taking on water and has been mauled by the French flagship. One French frigate manages to escape, but the other five ships surrender (10:276+).

Dead: The Surgeon of a French 74 (10:276).

Saved: The day, by Stephen, who calms the Irish crowd at Duniry about to storm the wrecked French ship in search for guns (10:279).

Wounded: Capt. Duff, of the Stately, lost a leg in the battle (10:281).

Dead: the Duke of Habachtsthal, slit his own throat (10:281).

Reunited: Diana and Stephen. Diana has been staying with a Villiers uncle just outside Duniry (10:282).

Table 17-3: Met or mentioned elsewhere in The Commodore

Notes:

- 1. Aurora is sometimes spelled "Aurore" (e.g. p.149, 210) and Camilla is sometimes spelled "Camille" (e.g. p.78, 275) in the book.
- 2. He first appears in 4:97 as "Dick Richards," then again in 7:166 as "Dick Richardson" In both places he is referred to as Captain of the Laurel and as "Spotted Dick."
- 3. Named several times in this book. In other books this role was filled by a "Miss O'Mara."
- 4. "Mr Klopstock, he dead." Said Square. This may be an oblique reference to Conrad's "Heart of Darkness," where there is a phrase: "Mr Kurtz, he dead."
- 5. There is a servant at Ashgrove named "Jennings," and a "Jennings" delivers Jack's admiral's uniform in his dog cart. It's possible these are the same person, but in context a servant probably didn't have a dog cart of his own, and Jack's comments indicate he was glad of Jenning's punctuality. They have been listed as two separate people here.

18: The Yellow Admiral

Pardoned: Clarissa Oakes, Padeen Colman, and Stephen Maturin, arranged by Sir Joseph Blaine, made easy after the death of the Duke of Habachtsthal (1:2).

Denounced: Stephen Maturin, by Jean Dutourd, to the Spanish authorities, who have embargoed his fortune (1:4).

Lost: Stephen has also lost his receipt for the gold, which he may have left as a bookmark in General Synopsis of Birds (1:8).

Dead: Sir Oliver Floode, Frances' husband. Frances (Sophia's sister) is now running a boarding school (1:20).

"Why, Stephen, there you are,' called Jack from the breakfast-room." They are at Woolcombe (2:24).

Injured: George, pushed by Brigid imitating a move in a prize fight. Though he is bleeding profusely, there is no lasting damage (3:56).

Injured: Both Bonden and Black Evans beat each other up in a prize fight. Stephen is very worried about possible brain damage (3:67+).

Deceived: Diana and Clarissa Oakes conspire to keep Jack Aubrey from getting his orders before he can vote against enclosure at Parliament. Admiral Lord Stranraer commands the Brest Blockade, where Bellona is now stationed. A staunch supporter of "enclosures" he knows Jack, an MP, is opposed. He sends Jack orders to join the blockade before Jack has a chance to vote in Parliament, but Jack does not manage to receive the orders until after the fact (3:63-69).

"...but I really think you ought to hurry straight back to West Bay so that the tender may rejoin the ship at once, without missing the selfsame tide. There is not a moment to lose." Diana to Mr. Callaghan, who has brought the orders to Jack (3:63).

Alibis: Jack explains Clarissa Oakes' red dress as a wedding dress as he denies any involvement with her. He tells her that since they were married he has "never played the fool at sea." This is technically correct, the operative words being "at sea" (3:76).

"Do, my dear, if you please,' said Stephen. 'It is our certain duty to be aboard without the loss of a minute." To Diana, urging her to get the carriage to the dock as soon as possible (4:83).

Wounded: The owner of The Feather's, lost a leg in the "Glorious Action" (First of June) (4:84).

Injured: Evan Lloyd, cook's mate, hurt his foot with a falling holystone aboard Ringle, as it was sailing to the Brest blockade (4:90).

Illness: Lord Admiral Stranraer is in pain and consults Stephen (4:100).

Dead: 600 aboard Le Droit de l'Homme when it went aground in 1796. Related by Lt. Harding, who was a Master's Mate at the time (5:108-111).

Sick Bay Report: A Marine, gashed by a recoiling cannon, sewn up, plus a few sprains and rope burns, after a gun exercise (5:123).

Dead: 600 when Royal George (100) sank Superbe in Quiberon Bay with two broadsides, in 1759, a reminisce (5:123).

Illness: Several syphilitic patients dosed with mercury (5:125).

Dead: Mr. Geoghegan, midshipman and oboe player, a fall from the top gallant yards while skylarking. It was instant death as he hit a carronade (5:131).

Busted: Jack Aubrey, by letters from Amanda Smith referring to their liaison and her alleged pregnancy, which he kept in a box in the library at Woolcombe, only to be found by Mrs. Williams (6:147).

Married: Mrs. Morris to Mr. Briggs, her manservant. They have also taken all the money and left Mrs. Williams in dire straits, which is why she was staying at Woolcombe and came to find the Amanda Smith letters (6:148).

Pawned: Diana's Blue Peter, for £50,000 (6:149).

"I am also under orders to require you to proceed off Ushant without the loss of a moment and to report to the flag..." Capt Fanshawe to Jack repeating the Admiral's admonishment that Jack let two French escape. He then asks Jack to dinner. "Thank you very much, Billy,' said Jack, but without the loss of a moment stands in the way." (6:151).

Action: While in heavy weather and fog and in-line with other ships on the Brest blockade Jack chases a sail which turns out to be a French privateer about to take a British merchant. Jack ignores the signal to tack in turn and chases instead. They take the Les Deux Freres with no loss of life. It turns out the privateer is heavily laden with gold dust and goods taken from previous prizes. This may lead Jack out of debt, but also further increases the displeasure of Admiral Lord Stranraer (6:159-60).

Coup: Stephen catches wind of a Spanish intelligence operation that intends to burgle Sir Joseph Blaine's house. He also has names of several British officials who have been compromised. Blaine and Stephen lie in wait during the burglary, which nets them Don Diego Diaz caught red handed committing a capital offense, from whom they hope to extract many concessions (6:175-180).

Rumor: Captain Adeane and Sophia? Diana worries she and Clarissa may have overdone it when discussing Jack's affair with Amanda. They suggested to her that her self-righteousness was wholly wrong, and that having an affair herself would take away that issue (8:188-9).

Bigamist: Mr. Briggs, who, as it turns out, has several wives in addition to Mrs. Morris (8:186).

Affair: "Aunt Williams is to be the prime witness for the prosecution. She is so proud and important—swears she will never leave till the man is hanged and she and her friend will end their days together." Diana to Stephen.

Restored: Stephen Maturin's fortune. It turns out his lack of a receipt did not matter. There is no word on how the Spanish embargo was lifted (8:186).

"I have breeches for riding, do you see, and I would not lose a minute changing them, May I sit next to you?" Brigid to Stephen (8:189).

Sick Bay Report: Overrun with poxes after a run ashore at Dock, plus four broken limbs and several dislocations (8:201).

Dead: Three men washed over the side of the forecastle in heavy weather (8:201).

Illness: Bowden, underwent a superpubic cystotomy performed by Stephen (9:211).

Action: HMS Eurotas (38) versus Clorinde (28). Clorinde would have won the encounter but for the appearance of HMS Dryad (36) and HMS Achates (18). As related by Jack, who seems to have the battle memorized. His point: A smaller ship can take a larger one (9:216).

Wounded: Capt. Phillimore, fainted three times from loss of blood in the action related above (9:216).

"There you are, Stephen,' said Jack. 'We have just reached the western end of the Black Rocks and we are starting our run in for the Goulet..." Jack has heard gunfire and is headed for the action (9:219).

Action: HMS Aboukir (74) and HMS Ramillies (74) versus two unnamed French 74s. Reade in the Ringle relates that the two English ships have been badly mauled, with Aboukir grounded on Basse Beuzel Reef. Bellona and Grampus attempt to get to the fight, where HMS Naiad, a 38 gun frigate, is peppering the French 74's in an attempt to divert their attention from the grounded Aboukir. The tide lifts Aboukir off the reef, whereupon she begins firing in earnest. Bellona's chasers and a few forward guns get off a few shots before the French flee as they are outnumbered with the arrival of the two additional British 74's. If Bellona and Grampus had not arrived, it is very likely the incident would have turned out differently, a fact that Admiral Lord Stranraer chooses to ignore (9:220+).

Wounded: Many on Aboukir, which Stephen went over to help (9:221).

Recovered: Lord Stranraer is apparently recovered through the use of digitalis. He says he ran up the masthead and credits Stephen's ministrations (9:226-7).

Dead: Two lieutenants many years ago, killed in action. Their sons served as midshipmen aboard Bellona (10:239).

Dismissed the Service: Jack Aubrey is nearing the top of the Post Captain's list. Because of the ill will and great influence of Admiral Lord Stranraer, Stephen and Sir Joseph Blaine concoct a scheme to loan Jack to the Department of Hydrography where he will be expected to take the Surprise to South America along with Stephen, who will attempt the same sort of coup they tried in Peru. Jack is promised reinstatement, but for now he is off the list (10:246).

Hired: Surprise, His Majesty's hired vessel (10:247).

Injured: Jack Aubrey, his collar bone broken when he was thrown from a horse. (10:248).

Injured: Essex, foreman of the shipyard working on Surprise, gashed in the foot with an adze (10:250).

Injured: Captain Wrangham, of Pomone, a broken leg (10:259).

Illness: Admiral Lord Stranraer, appears to be self-dosing digitalis (10:259).

Posted: Jack Aubrey, as Commodore, to Pomone, on the event of Napoleon's escape from Elba. Initially his squadron consists of Rainbow, and Ganymede, both corvettes, Briseis, Pomone, Surprise, and Dover, all frigates. Presumably Jack Aubrey is back on the Post Captain's list for the duration of his mission (10:261).

"...You are to take all His Majesty's ships and vessels at present in Funchal under your command, hoisting your broad pennant in Pomone, and as soon as Briseis joins you will proceed without the loss of a moment to Gibraltar," Admiral Lord Keith's orders to Jack (10:261).

Table 18-2: Crew of Surprise (4th commission)

Notes:

- 1. Most of this book takes place on Bellona, but a new crew of Surprise begins to take shape at the very end of the book, as it begins a voyage to South America as a hired vessel, still owned by Stephen Maturin.
- 2. Strictly speaking, a hired vessel would not carry members of the armed forces. The 1st Lieutenant would be a "First Mate" and so on. However, in the canon, when this situation takes place, there is some evident leeway on this issue.
- 3. A number of crewmembers deserted ship at the beginning of this book, after prize money was distributed and peace was declared.
- 4. Maggie Cheal's last name transforms to "Tyler" at the beginning of Blue at the Mizzen.
- 5. For crew members of HMS Bellona, see Table 17-2.

Table 18-3: Met or mentioned e

Table 18-3: Met or mentioned elsewhere in The Yellow Admiral

Notes:

- 1. Stephen says "I have never had a Manton gun at all." (2:27) In fact, he has. He used a Manton rifle inherited from Edward Fox in Nutmeg of Consolation (likely the same one used to kill Ledward and Wray) to feed the marooned crew of Diane (NC 1-11). He later gave this rifle to Wan Da (3:62). Stephen used a pair of Joe Manton pistols aboard Surprise (HMS 6:180), and he also used Macdonald's pistols in preparation for his aborted duel with Aubrey in Post Captain (10:342).
- 2. Spelled "Mitchel" in the text here, but usually spelled "Mitchell".
- 3. The phrase is ambiguous. Philip Aubrey said: "My grandfather, the General, married again after Jack's mother died: she was called Stanhope." (YA 8:194). First of all, Philip had to have meant his father, not his grandfather, since it is well-established that Jack and Philip are half-brothers. Secondly, the name "Stanhope" could refer to either Jack's real mother or to his step-mother.

19: The Hundred Days

Dead: Admiral Lord Stranraer, of heart problems, brought about by self-dosing, though the rumor is that his medicos slowly killed him (1:3).

Dead: Governor Wood of Sierra Leone (1:3).

Dead: Diana Villiers, in a carriage accident at Maiden Oscott on the infamous bridge when she missed her turn. (1:4) Also killed were Captain Cholmondeley, with whom Diana was rumored to be having an affair, Mrs. Williams, Sophia's mother, and Mrs. Williams' companion, Mrs. Morris (1:9).

"If any of the two-deckers have openly declared for Napoleon you must not venture upon an action but send to me without the loss of a moment." Admiral Lord Keith's orders to Jack Aubrey (1:15).

"Why, Stephen, there you are,' cried Jack." Stephen has just heard of Governor Wood's death. Jack is suggesting condolences could be sent to Christine Wood (1:28).

Transferred: Jack moves his pennant from Pomone to Surprise (1:30).

Injured: Several men aboard the Pomone during a gun exercise, because they had never seen a gun fired and were unfamiliar (2:37).

Rescued: Elpenor, the Greek, fished out after falling overboard Pomone (2:45).

Illness: 2 suprapubic cystotomies performed by Stephen in the hospital (2:47).

"He said he could certainly look after the local Moors if they came back, with the small arms we had given them, and he bade us shove off instantly—there was not a moment to lose." Pomone's First Lieutenant to Mr. Reade, directing him to tell Aubrey about an East Indiaman convoy about to be attacked (2:49).

"Then be so good as to look into the harbour, and if you see more than two or three corsairs—big xebec-rigged corsairs and galleys—stand half a mile offshore and send up three blue lights. If less then red lights and rejoin without the loss of a moment." Jack to Mr. Reade, and repeated by him (2:54).

Action: A convoy of East Indiamen has been attacked by a score of xebecs and galleys off the coast of Africa. The rearmost East Indiaman was ablaze when Aubrey's squadron arrived. Surprise hit the nearest xebec with two broadsides, enough to sink her, while Ringle attacked a half-galley. The attackers had been badly mauled by the armed East Indiamen prior. Pomone destroyed three galleys, two of them by simply ramming them and cutting them in two (2:57+).

Dead & Wounded: Two dead on Surprise when a gun was struck on the muzzle. A score in sick bay with musket and splinter wounds. The other five ships were "much the same case" (2:59).

Sick Bay Report: A few seriously injured, plus routine strains, common fractures, contusions, and powder burns (2:62).

Illness: Capt Hugh Pomfret of Pomone, low in spirits because he has killed Christian slaves chained to the oars of the galleys he destroyed, consults with Stephen (2:62).

Wounded: Three getting worse. Thomas with a leg amputation, another with a resection, and a third in need of a trephine, sent to the hospital at Gibraltar (3:64).

Injured: A gang of workmen on the mole, by a falling crane (3:64).

"There you are, Doctor,' said Jack. 'Come and take a draught. How are our people?" Jack is asking after his crewmen still in the hospital (3:65).

Dead: Capt. Hugh Pomfret, his brains blown out while "cleaning his pistols" (3:65).

Promoted: Commander John Vaux to Post Captain aboard Pomone (3:65).

Luck: Jacob brought Stephen a "Hand of Glory" to dissect, an omen the seamen consider lucky (3:68).

Broken: Stephen's narwhal horn, also a symbol of luck aboard ship, by Killick and a third-class boy, both drunk (2:89).

Injured: On Pomone, after extensive gun exercises, recoils, powder and flash burns, robe burns, treated on Surprise because the surgeon on Pomone had a case of double pox (4:94).

Illness: Cases of boils on Surprise, plus additional injuries from Pomone's gun exercises (4:96).

Illness: Naseby, the marine Captain Hobden's dog, after swallowing the lucky "Hand of Glory.". Captain Hobden initially insulted Stephen over the incident. A duel was averted because Aubrey forced Hobden to apologize. Stephen gave the dog an emetic to make him throw it back up, but only bones were left (4:100).

Luck Restored: Jacob and Stephen wire the bones of the Hand of Glory together with the carpal bones embedded in pitch. The seamen form a long line and file by for a look (4:100).

"There you are, Doctor,' cried Jack, turning from the starboard rail, 'a very good morning to you. Here's a glorious sight." Jack, pointing out two French frigates, Captain Christy-Pallière commanding. He has declared as a Royalist and is therefore now on the British side (4:105).

Illness: Two patients with the bloody flux (4:111).

Action: Surprise and Pomone versus Ardent. Surprise encounters Ardent nestled under shore batteries along the coast of Italy near Ragusa Vecchio in the company of two Algerian vessels. The combined Marines from both British ships are let ashore to take care of the batteries while Surprise sails right up to Ardent and hails her to surrender. Instead, Ardent declares for Napoleon. Surprise fires both sides at once and the Algerian ships, far outclassed, move away. Meanwhile the Marines silence the batteries. A well-directed shot from Surprise hits near Ardent's magazine, which explodes and sinks the French frigate (5:124+).

Dead and Wounded: Harris, dead from a musket ball. Edwardes, a broken arm. Six splinter wounds and two hit by falling blocks. On Pomone: Four powder burns, and some men hurt by falling blocks and timber. Although Jack does indicate there may have been some survivors aboard Ardent, there is no word of how many. Given the size of the ship this could easily mean 200 dead (5:129).

"Then pray lower them down {the boats}. Pick up what survivors you can and recover our Marines. Land the prisoners at Ragusa—the new Ragusa up the coast—and then follow me to Spalato without the loss of a minute." Jack to Capt. Vaux of the Pomone (5:129).

Injured: Dr. Jacob, a gash in the leg while climbing aboard Surprise (5:132).

Action: A second French frigate, the Cerbère, is encountered off Spalato. Stephen goes aboard to arrange a fake battle with blank broadsides on both sides. Capt. Delalande agrees to this proposal, and after a number of broadsides from all three ships, the Cerbère follows Pomone back to Malta (5:134+).

"There you are, gentlemen,' called the Commodore from by the wheel." Jack to Stephen and Amos Jacob. Marginal in that Jacob is included (5:137).

Wounded: Three or four hands with rope burns or getting in the way of a gun carriage. John Daniel, bruised and a broken collar bone from a wooden disk shot from Cerbère's cannon in their mutual "salute" of broadsides (5:143).

Burned: Beryolucci's Shipyard, along with the Nereide, a corvetto (5:143), Papapopoulos' Shipyard, Pavelic's Shipyard (5:144). Simon Macchabe's Shipyard (5:147), seven shipyards at the Durazzo (5:149). We have no exact number, but much later on Jack mentions they burned "a score" of shipyards, all due to Stephen's bribe money (9:248).

Injured: Mr. Daniel. His collar bone again, when he fell during a strong wind aboard Surprise (6:151).

"There you are, Stephen,' he cried, his red face and bright blue eyes full of delight—he looked ten years younger." Jack is enjoying a strong wind (6:153).

"Dear colleague, here is the boat. Pray urge them to waste not a minute." They wasted not a minute..." Stephen to Amos Jacob. They are trying to pick up intelligence ashore on the whereabouts of a ship full of gold intended to pay mercenaries to help Napoleon (6:155).

Illness: Capt. Hobden, of the Marines, an alcoholic coma (6:159).

Sick Bay Report: 2 gleets and a tenesmus (the first being probably gonorrhea) (6:160).

"Stephen felt in his pocket for the ministerial letter, heard the reassuring crackle, and said, 'Never in life: let us not lose a minute. Boy, will you wait here, sitting in the shade of a palm-tree?" Amos Jacob has suggested a rest stop as they walk up hundreds of stairs to the British consulate in Algiers (6:167).

Action: Stephen and Amos Jacob set out to convince the local ruler, Omar Pasha, not to allow the gold treasure to cross his territory. Omar Pasha is hunting, so Stephen and Jacob travel out to meet him, first passing through a base camp where the Pasha's Vizier learns of the issue. Vizier Hashin cooperates, so the two doctors proceed to meet Omar Pasha in the field (7:175-201).

Buried: The Blue Peter diamond, with Diana (7:180).

Dead: Mahmud, a male lion, and his mate. The first shot by Omar Pasha, the second shot by Stephen as she charged the cave where Stephen and Omar Pasha were hiding. Omar Pasha had shot twice and was thus unarmed. Stephen saved his life (7:199).

Present: Omar Pasha gave Stephen the fowling piece he used to shoot the lion, an American squirrel gun (7:202).

Dead: William Duran, killed by a rigged fowling piece, something to do with his being incautious around a woman. This, a reminisce on the occasion of Stephen finding the American rifle he so admired as a present from the Pasha. The implication is that this rifle should be carefully inspected before use in case a similar mishap should occur (7:202).

Traitor: Amos Jacob discovers Ahmed ben Hanbal, the under secretary to Vizier Hashin, is also a Cainite. Ahmed tells Jacob the Vizier has told the Sheikh of Azgar to retrieve the gold from a caravan and place it aboard ship. Ahmed demands no reward, but asks for a "good word" to the Governor of Malta so that he eventually might move to Valletta (7:205).

Stolen: Stephen's squirrel gun is missing from his luggage (7:206).

Dead: Omar Pasha, strangled in a coup and replaced by Ali Bey, a man said to be friendly to the British (8:211).

Rescued: Kevin and Mona Fitzpatrick, twins, about six years old, Irish children who had been captured by Moors and sold into slavery, purchased by Stephen (8:217).

Recovered: Stephen's squirrel gun, sent by Vizier Hashin, who called the incident a misunderstanding. Vizier Hashin had been backing Mustafa as the new Bey, but the post went to Ali Bey instead and Mustafa was "lead away." The Vizier hopes that if Stephen had mentioned the loss of the rifle to Ali Bey, that he might now also say that it had been recovered (8:222).

Action: A reminisce by Mr. Reade explaining the condition of Surprise, which was attempting to help HMS Lion, which had been dismasted. A tow line had been fastened between the two ships when a Dutchman severed the tow line and hit Surprise, causing a great deal of damage and several days of heavy pumping until they made it back to Mahon for repairs (8:227-8).

Injured: Strains, hernias, and falling blocks caused by the encounter (8:228).

Restored: The Narwhal Horn, expertly cemented back together by Mr. James Wright. (8:233)

Sick Bay Report: Several with shore based diseases (probably venereal) picked up in Mahon, plus "Military Fever" (9:237).

Reverted: Surprise, to a private ship, His Majesty's Hired Vessel, loaned to the Hydrography Department (9:248).

Entrusted: Kevin and Mona Fitzpatrick to Lady Keith, who will arrange for their return to Ireland and their parents (9:252).

Illness: Abram White, drank three bladders of rum at once, then fell down the fore hatchway (9:255). A couple of poxes and a hernia (9:257).

Action: Surprise versus the galley, Part One. Jack sets up a net consisting of Ringle, the Blue Cutter, and Surprise on a moonless night. They fairly quickly find the treasure galley and give chase. The galley fired first at Surprise. Jack did fire back, but did not want to sink the galley and thus lose the treasure. The chase encompassed several days (9:262+).

Dead: Barret Bonden and Mr. Hallam, midshipman, killed with a 24 pound ball from a chaser aboard Murad Reis's galley full of gold struck Surprise's second starboard gun (10:263-4).

Illness: Sunstroke, 3 cases (10:268).

Dead: Dozens of manacled slaves thrown overboard to save food as the galley gets wind and has no more need of oarsmen. There are many sharks in the water (10:268).

Action: The galley took refuge in an inlet on Crab (Cranc) Island. Because of the shallow water Surprise could not follow, but low tide meant the galley couldn't get out, either. McLeod, a seaman who had recently joined, had been aboard Centaur when Captain Hood took Diamond Rock by hoisting cannon up a sheer cliff via a series of pulleys and ropes. He told Jack of the possibility and Jack agreed. They hoisted a single brass nine pounder and placed it on a cliff above the galley. Jack fired once and the crew of the galley surrendered (10:270-3).

Dead: Murad Reis, decapitated by his crew as they surrender to Surprise (10:273).

Rescued: Several British seamen who had been slaves aboard the galley (10:273).

Fires: As the Surprise returns with her prize to Gibraltar fires light the sky in celebration of Napoleon's defeat at Waterloo (10:275).

Demand: Ali Bey, the new sultan of Algiers, demands the return of the galley and the gold, claiming it is all his (10:276).

Thwarted: A potential affair between Jack and Isobel Barmouth (nee Carrington) as her husband, Admiral Lord Barmouth, orders Jack to sea (10:278).

Dead: Ali Bey, strangled, and replaced by Hassan, who drops all demands to the galley, but requests a small loan of £250,000 to help secure his leadership (10:279).

Table 19-2: Met or mentioned elsewhere in The Hundred Days

Notes

- 1. For the crew of the Surprise, see Table 18-2
- 2. Yahya ben Khaled is listed as the Captain of the xebec slated to carry the gold on pages 7:205 and 9:255, yet in the same conversation (9:255-56) he is referred to as Murad Reis. He must have two names.
- 3. Jack claims Ringle belongs to Stephen: "She belongs to my surgeon, sir, and acts as our tender." (9:248) Unless there was an unrecorded transaction between them, Jack owns Ringle, which he won from Heneage Dundas in a backgammon game and Stephen, though he has agreed to sell her to Jack, still is the owner of Surprise.

20: Blue at the Mizzen

Injured: Dr. Amos Jacob, severed an artery in his arm during a fall in bad weather (1:6).

Prize: Shares distributed from Murad Reis' galley full of gold, condemned as a pirate for firing on a British ship. The seamen divided their half of the prize into 157 equal pieces. Each man took over £382, which was over 18 year's pay. Captain Aubrey received two eighths minus a third to the Admiral, a total of £19,991, which amounted to nearly 100 year's pay compared to the captain of a sixth rate (1:3).

Injured: Surprise, hit by a Scandinavian timber ship in heavy weather at night. Bowsprit and head carried away, took on water at five tons a minute, sprung butts, just off Gibraltar. Just prior the crew was attempting to ship a top light that had gone bad, the lack of which may have meant the ship was not visible in the darkness. Surprise had to limp back to port for repairs (1:8).

Wounded: Mr. James Wright, by three drunken sailors who robbed him. Bruises and a grazed elbow. This after Jack muses on the superiority of sailors as compared to soldiers (1:22).

Deserted: Flush with prize money, many of the crew deserted to Spain. Higgs and John Anderson were the only two specifically listed (1:25).

Bribed: Jack bribes private shipyard workers to work on Surprise for 10 Guineas a day plus wood (1:27).

Affair of heart: Accused: Jack and Isobel Barmouth by Lord Barmouth's mistress, prompting Lord Barmouth to reverse his position and get Surprise, a hired private ship, provisioned and out of Gibraltar as soon as possible. Though his mistress's accusation of the two meeting in a hay loft on a daily basis are probably untrue, they did spend significant time together, and Isobel saw off the Surprise both times she left port (2:30-39).

Illness: Pox, many varieties from the seamen's shore bound excursions (2:40).

Burned: Coelho's Shipyard at Madeira. Jack had hoped to continue refitting Surprise there (2:41).

Rescued: Henry Wantage, "rescued" from Funchal, where he says he had tried to rejoin the ship, but had been held captive. Very likely he had been caught with a shepherd's wife and castrated (2:42).

"'There you are, Stephen,' he cried." Jack is very pleased that one of his estates brought in £450 this last year, much more than his pay as a post captain (2:51).

"I shall send her {Ringle} off tonight, with the falling tide, and desire Jack to put into Seppings' yard for the repairs that are still needed without the loss of a minute." Stephen to Sir Joseph Blaine (3:65).

Married: Clarissa Oakes, to the rector of Wytherton, Rev. Andrews (3:66).

Injured: Mr. Wells, midshipman, whose pony tossed him into a bramble and stone-filled ditch. Bloodied and in need of several stitches (3:73).

Midshipman: George Aubrey is now a midshipman aboard Lion, whose Captain is Heneage Dundas (3:74). Dundas seems displeased with him later on (9:204).

Illness: ³/₄ of the crew suffered from dysentery from eating old salt pork (4:87-9).

Injured: Mr. Hanson, midshipman, split the skin of his hand in a fight (4:90).

Proposal: Stephen Maturin to Christine Wood, initially refused, but Christine agrees to think about it (5:121).

Injured: A seaman from the Erebus, in a fight with Hanson, who was beaten a bit about the head and shoulders (5:127-130).

"There you are,' he cried, raising his head with a smile." Stephen reports to Jack that his proposal to Christine, though refused, would be considered. Stephen has also arranged that Christine should call upon Sophia while she is in England, and perhaps stay at Woolcombe, and perhaps get to know Brigid (5:131).

Dead: Henry Wantage, Master's Mate, and two additional boys, from yellow fever (6:134).

Promoted: Horatio Hanson, to Master's Mate, over Daniel because Hanson has more time on the books, time when he wasn't actually aboard ship (6:135).

Illness: Mr. Woodbine, Sailing Master, his health is failing, but we don't know the exact cause. He thinks he has leprosy (6:136).

Success: Mr. Herapath, his medical studies in America described as gifted, and his book of Chinese poetry a success (6:154).

Injuries: Three fractures to be set (6:156).

Injured: Several hands when a cannon was pushed loose by ice (7:165).

Injured: Bjorn, three ribs broken in a blow when he fell (7:168).

"...Captain Aubrey has decided that duty requires him to waste not a minute in the placid navigation of slow, sheltered waters...' Stephen in a latter to Christine Wood (7:171).

Illness: Scurvy is suspected on board. Woodbine remains ill (7:172).

Dead: Four crewmen of pneumonia (7:172).

Dead: Woodbine, Henry (8:176).

Sick Bay Report: Enemas administered for gross surfeit from eating rich sea meat, replacing the frostbites, torsions, and debilities suffered from rounding the Horn (8:177). Also, three more fractures and "what was to be expected" after a blow (8:181).

Promoted: John Daniel, to Sailing Master (thus leap-frogging Hanson), upon the death of Woodbine (8:178).

Injured: Seaman from a whaler with a mangled arm, amputated by Stephen at the shoulder (8:182-3).

Injured: Ringle, severely when she grounded on an uncharted reef, new with the last earthquake at Pillón. Beached for temporary repairs (8:187).

Prize: A privateer taken by Surprise (9:200).

Sick Bay Report: Two hernias and two obstinate poxes (9:216).

Action: Bernardo O'Higgins and Jack combine forces to take Valdivia. 250 soldiers are supplemented by some of the crew on shore while Surprise bombards the fort from sea. The defenders are driven out of each fort along the mole one by one. Many are killed in the battle where there are no casualties on the Allied side (9:221-26).

"Exactly so, sir: and as soon as they are written, I shall entrust them to Mr. Reade, who commands the schooner, with orders to proceed to Concepción without the loss of a minute..." Jack to O'Higgins, who is sending for his troops just prior to the action (9:221).

Dead: A soldier demanding that recently captured gold and silver be shared out among all who participated in the raid, shot on the spot by O'Higgins (9:225).

Wounded: "A few" but none killed at the action at Valdivia (Interchapter: 227).

Action: Surprise cuts out Esmeralda at Callo. Esmeralda is a 44 gun flagship of the Spanish presence on the West Coast of South America. Capturing her would be a big blow to what is left of the Spanish fleet. In the initial action Surprise sails in looking like a merchantman, comes alongside Esmeralda, and simply starts firing away. Jack Aubrey then leads a boarding party. As dusk falls the nearby Fort begins to open fire, and Jack sees the nearby ships from Boston and Liverpool have hauled up signal lights for the Fort not to fire on them. Jack orders a boat back to Surprise to do the same and heads back to the fight, where he is targeted because of his uniform and knocked down by a pistol ball. An opponent impales his thigh to the deck and is subsequently killed by Awkward Davies. Hanson stands over Jack to protect him until they can remove the sword and drag Jack to safety. Hanson then manages to hack through an unusually large cable mooring the ship, and the crew sails her out of the port (10:238-241).

Wounded: Linklatter, carpenter's crew, lost his arm (10:243).

"Stephen, I should not like to lose a moment having this letter fair-copied..." Jack, with an obvious eye to the South African squadron just being formed, intends to write to the Admiralty concerning his victory. Stephen must dissuade him, since Jack is technically working for the Chileans. Stephen writes to Sir Joseph Blaine instead (10:243).

Dead: "Some good seamen will be sadly missed." But we have no accounting on who or how many (10:243).

Wounded: "William," in the leg. This is probably not William Reade, but someone close to the coxswain (10:248).

"Let us seal the letter, direct it to San Martin, and send it off without the loss of a moment." Stephen to Amos Jacob as he is about to send off the letter of victory to the Chilean authorities (10:249).

Prize: Jack is granted an "estate" in Chile, 6,000 acres which turns out to be inhabited by hostile natives and monkey trees (10:252).

Granted: 5,000 pieces of eight by Miguel Carerra. Jack expects money from the treasure captured at Valdivia, plus prize money from Esmerelda. Chilean authorities have refused to pay this out, therefore Surprise and her men have not been paid. It is clear that his grant is intended to be an interim help, but it is unclear whether this was paid out as prize money (10:255).

Promoted: Jack Aubrey, to Rear Admiral of the Blue, to join the South African squadron. The refusal of the Chilean authorities to grant the prize money gives Jack an excuse to resign from Chilean service (10:261).

21: The Final Unfinished Voyage of Jack Aubrey

Injured: Ship's boy, stunned by a mallet he tossed into the air in the foretop (1:6).

Injured: Harding, 1st Lt, a broken leg, both the fibula and tibia (1:20).

Injured: Several hands with bumps and bruises after a blow (1:22).

Sick Bay Report: sunburns, moon-palls, and parakeet bites (1:32). Plus a few more strains, broken bones, and one raging toothache (1:34).

Relations restored: In Argentina relations prove troublesome for the British, who arrive just in time for civil unrest. However, the arrival of the Catholic prelate, a much revered figure, settles things down. The prelate is Sam Panda, Jack's son. He is now using the last name of his mother, Mputa (1:42).

Raised: The Blue ensign of a Rear Admiral at the Mizzen of Suffolk (2:54). Each crew member on Surprise had sewn part of the hem (1:8).

Dead: 3rd Lieutenant of Pegasus, shot through the head while boarding a Frenchman, a reminisce with Capt. Simmons, who was also aboard. This death resulted in Aubrey taking over the 3rd Lieutenants billet temporarily (2:56).

Dead and III: The Suffolk suffered severe losses from Yellow Fever off Port of Spain, and is now short handed (2:62).

Injured: George Aubrey, a green stick fracture, as reported in a letter from home, which earned him an additional three months of leave from Lion (2:66).

Transferred: Jack takes 63 men from Surprise to the Suffolk. This probably does not count his regular followers such as Killick and the midshipmen (2:67).

Illness: Haines, sailmaker's mate, a twisting of the gut and strangled hernia (3:19B).

Duel: Captain Randolph Miller makes a nuisance of himself to Christine Wood, who asks Stephen to tell him not to visit without an invitation. Miller slaps Stephen, and a duel is to ensue. Miller at first refuses to fight unless he is allowed to use pistols, as he is a well-known excellent marksman. However, the aggrieved party, in this case Stephen Maturin, gets to choose the weapons. Stephen, of course, chooses swords. He knocks Miller's sword away from him and forces him to apologize—without hurting him (3:23a-24).

Main Index

This index covers the main text of this work. It shows people who have been injured, wounded, or who have been sick with italic page numbers. People who have died are shown with bold-faced page numbers. People who have escaped any of those fates, but are listed for other reasons are listed with normal page numbers. Titles (Mr., Lt., etc.) are not shown unless they serve to distinguish between two or more people.

Example:

Smith, Seaman 27, 34, 103, 147

Seaman Smith was mentioned on page 27, was injured, wounded, or ill on both pages 34 and 103, and was discharged dead on page 147.

Crew Index

This index list all crew members and passengers on all ships commanded by Jack Aubrey in the canon, and on several ships where he was a passenger himself. Once again, italic page numbers refer to those who are ill, injured, or wounded during that commission, and bold page numbers refer to deceased persons. Titles (Mr., Lt., etc.) are usually not shown unless they serve to distinguish between individuals. Crew members with exactly the same name are distinguished insofar as that is possible. Often there is insufficient information. Is a seaman with the common name of "Wilson" in Sophie the same one who is in the last commission of Surprise? Perhaps. On the other hand, a person with an uncommon name in back to back commissions is likely the same person. It is a judgment call without enough evidence.

Met or mentioned elsewhere Index

This index lists people met ashore or in other ships during the course of the canon. People with exactly the same name are distinguished insofar as that is possible. Historical personalities are not listed as dead unless their death is specifically referred to in the canon. A few pervasive personalities such as Napoleon are mentioned in every book, but not accounted for here.
